

BREWERTON'S BILL BOARD OF THE WEEK'S EVENTS

OFFERS BIG REWARD FOR EVIDENCE AGAINST FRANK

Burns to Give $1,000 for Proof of Perversion-Detective Disappears

In a signed statement Sunday afternoon William J. Burns offered a reward of $1,000 to any person who will furnish him with definite and satisfactory evidence concerning any act of perversion or immorality on the part of Leo M. Frank.

The action of the famous detective in offering the reward is construed as meaning that he has found nothing to substantiate the attack of the state on Leo Frank's character. The trial last night.

Burns' statement, signed and made in the form of a letter to the editor of The Journal, follows:

"In making my investigation of the Frank case it is of the highest importance that I get at the truth of the reports concerning acts of perversion and immorality on the part of Leo M. Frank.

In the papers yesterday, I requested that persons having information bearing in any way on the matter would communicate with me at once. Having received no response at all from any person, and having obtained no information in this way, I am compelled, on account of the extreme importance of the matter, to make this statement. That I will pay $1,000 to any person, or persons, who will furnish me any definite and satisfactory information on the above lines."

It is noted that Burns does not qualify his offer of a $1,000 reward except that it will be paid for definite and satisfactory information. He stated Friday that he was anxious to get any definite information derogatory to Frank's character, regardless of the time any efforts may have been expended. STATES WITNESSES UNFEIGNED.

At the trial heard a dozen girls appeared for the state to swear that Frank's character is bad. These witnesses were not cross-examined by the defense, and as the result charges of perversion do not exclude these witnesses if they can tell him of definite acts.

By his questioning of witnesses, Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey has implied that Frank had the trial insisted that a number of women, when he named, and one woman, according to one of Dorsey's questions, had thrown away money, which Frank, when he is alleged to have made an indirect reference to Dorsey, has studied the record of the case, does not exclude from an offer of a reward these people named by Dorsey.

In other words, it is practically an admission by him that the state's charges are false.

Chief of Detectives Newport A. Lafford, when told of the offer of a reward, quickly said:

"I don't want his money, but if Mr. Burns comes down here we can furnish him with all the information along that line he wants. In fact, I expect we can furnish him with more than he wants. We will be glad to do it."

Mr. Burns said, "I expect we can furnish him with more than he wants. We will be glad to do it."

BURNS DISAPPEARS
Burns mysteriously dropped out of sight Saturday afternoon, and a reporter was unable to locate him to secure a reply to the statement by the chief of detectives.

Burns has rooms at two hotels, but was at neither during the afternoon. He was in the office of his agency

Bearden, music director at St. John's church, has charge of the music. The public is cordially invited to attend these special meetings.

In the Healey building, Dan S. Lehon, his lieutenant, would not divulge the whereabouts of his chief.

Mr. Lehon said that he did not expect Burns to be visible Saturday night. He would not say whether he had seen him or not, nor when he would return to one of his hotels or to his office.

The mission on which Burns is engaged is of extreme importance, his lieutenant said. Mr. Lehon added that the investigation is progressing very satisfactorily.

A published rumor that William A. Pinkerton, head of the national agency that bears his name, was in Atlanta Saturday, watching Burns and developments in the Frank case, was found to be erroneous.

Pinkerton was in Springfield, Ark. where a Journal representative saw him on Saturday.

MRS. C. B. WILLINGHAM DIES FOLLOWING FALL

Injured in Tifton March 27, Widely Known Woman Succumbs Here

Mrs. Cecilia Baynard Willingham, widow of Thomas H. Willingham, died yesterday morning at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. C. J. Daniel, 108 Forrest avenue. On March 27, at her home in Tifton, Mrs. Willingham suffered a fall, from which she could not recover. She was brought to Atlanta and received the best of surgical and medical attention, but owing to her extreme old age she never rallied. Mrs. Willingham was born in Beaumont, La., on January 10, 1828. She was the daughter of Mr. Archibald Baynard, who married Mrs. Elizabeth Calder. In the rare old social environments of that day she grew up surrounded by all the comforts and luxuries that wealth could give in ante-bellum times. Beaumont and Charleston were centers of an aristocracy that wielded a large and splendid influence in affairs of church and state and ruled the society of that day.

In the Baynard family were many sons and daughters who grew to manhood and womanhood and these influences and their descendants are numerous and well known in that state and in Georgia.

Mrs. Baynard married Thomas H. Willingham, whose mother was a member of the Loxton family. She was the mother of fifteen children, ten of whom survive her. Mrs. E. H. Bacon, of Eastman; Mrs. T. O. B. Wood, Mrs. H. H. Tift, Mrs. J. W. Myers, and Mrs. J. Willingham, of Tifton; W. B. Willingham, B. L. Willingham, Baynard Willingham, and Mrs. C. J. Daniel, of Atlanta, and Mrs. W. L. Pickard, of Savannah.

Sunday morning her remains were carried to Albany, Ga., to be laid to rest beside her husband and others of the family.

GEORGE L. WORD MOVES TO HEALEY BUILDING

George L. Word, who for the past two years has been engaged in the mortgage loan business, announces his removal to room 1117 Healey building. Mr. Word, in addition to handling private funds, is placing loans on improved city property for the Title Guaranty Trust Co. of St. Louis, Mo. They have an unusually attractive ten year loan, and through Mr. Word, were induced to do business in Atlanta, which is the only city outside of St. Louis, where they are making this particular kind of a loan. In St. Louis, this company has loaned over seven million of dollars within the past fifteen years, and have never had a foreclosure. Those who have accepted their loans in Atlanta are highly pleased with them.

GEORGIA MINISTER FINDS TRUE DELIVERANCE FROM BODY LLS
Rev. J. Powell Tells How He Found New Strength to Give to His Labor

Rev. J. Powell, of Statesboro, Ga., suffered from stomach troubles so seriously that they affected his work. He struggled on under the handicap as best he could—hardly realizing, perhaps, just how much sickness was hurting him.

One day he learned of Mayor's Wonderful Stomach Remedy. He took the first dose—then decided to take the full treatment. He wrote:

"Since using the six bottles of your wonderful stomach remedy I feel like another man. It has been quite a wonder to me to know how one could have a stomach disease like mine and live and do the things I did. I just escaped the operating table."

Building Business
Recently, a large New York store of very honored name became insolvent and passed into the hands of a new owner—an energetic young man.

Little was left to the business but the good name. There were strong stores all around it.

The first thing this merchant did was to emphasize in his advertising that he kept well known, popular, advertised articles—mentioning those advertised in the local newspapers by the manufacturers.

He did not advertise them at a cut price. He merely let it be known that he carried them and would give good service.

That was a few months ago. Already the business has started to revive to an extent that competitors are sitting up and taking notice.

This man makes it a rule to mention every day in his advertising the name of some well known, branded article that he carries—a name that stands for character in the mind of the public.

Our interest and the interests of our customers are identical. We do not mean by this merely that it is good business to render good service.

We invest heavily in diamonds, and naturally take care that they are carefully and efficiently graded, weighed and priced. This we do ourselves as diamond specialists.

Diamonds carefully bought are an investment. They are particularly safe, marketable and appreciate in intrinsic value. They are not subject to manipulation or depreciation.

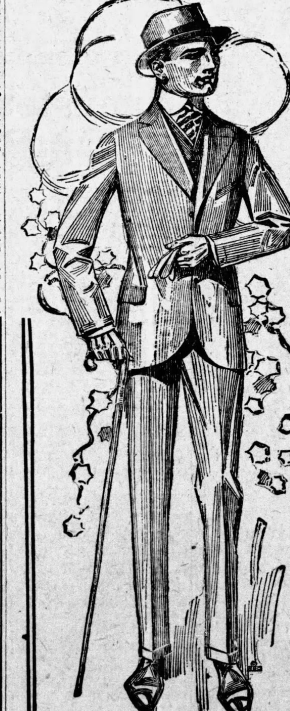

Our diamonds are marked in plain figures; nothing is hidden. If a stone is not perfect, the shape or cutting not correct, or if it is "off color" it is so marked.

Every diamond is absolutely guaranteed to be just what we sell it for, and you are therefore fully protected, as it is graded and classed to its real intrinsic value.

For effective work, those Illinois suffragists can show the English ones a thing or two.

The man who shouts the loudest during the political campaign very often forgets to register.

The committee on the selection of regional bank locations realizes that you cannot please all the cities all the time.

Oglethorpe University.

Atlanta was called upon some months ago to raise two hundred and fifty thousand dollars as her part of a fund for the re-establishment of historic Oglethorpe University. There was a brief, spirited campaign to which the community responded with generous enthusiasm, and in a few weeks the amount required was pledged. Indeed, Atlanta did more than she was asked to do, for, instead of pausing at the quarter-of-a-million mark she added more than twelve thousand dollars for bounteous measure, so that now her subscriptions aggregate two hundred and sixty-three thousand, one hundred and thirty dollars.

That fund is the foundation from which a truly great institution of learning is soon to rise. The University's total assets today approximate half a million dollars, including fifty-five thousand, two hundred and sixty-four dollars contributed in Georgia outside of Atlanta, fifty-eight thousand, eight hundred and ten dollars subscribed in other States, and a hundred thousand dollar site donated by the Silver Lake company. It is thus possible to begin preparations for actual building without further delay. In a few days, in fact, the grading and landscape work will be undertaken, and the cherished dream of a Southern Princeton will take on the hue and substance of reality.

It is purposed, however, that Oglethorpe University shall be made a million dollar institution. Nothing short of that will satisfy its friends, and it is every reason to believe that their hopes will be realized. Through the admirable work of Dr. Thorne-Jacobs, who is directing this particular phase of the enterprise, new contributions are being made at the rate of about ten thousand dollars a month; and when building actually begins, the response will naturally be quickened.

The people of Atlanta are to be congratulated on their part in this magnificent endeavor. They answered when the call of duty and opportunity came; they were prompt and liberal at the decisive moment; they furnished the first great impetus to a cause that will grow in magnitude through all the years to come.

In one way, however, the peach crop will not escape being canned.

It is easy to tell others how they might have succeeded after they fail.

Colonel Roosevelt doubtless succeeded in reminding South America of what it already knew.

Ten years from now New Orleans will see clearly enough why she had no business with a regional bank.

An Urgent Need; Let Council Act.

"Editor The Journal: I am a stranger in your town, and find it hard work to get readily about the city on account of the streets not being marked at corners. Why not put, on the buildings at each intersection, a small card or sign bearing the name of the street. It would be a great help to people not acquainted, and I guess you will have a plenty of them when the Shriners get here."

This suggestion from a visitor, who is one among thousands daily perplexed and embarrassed by Atlanta's lack of street designations, should stir Council to immediate action. The main thoroughfares at least should be marked so that strangers can find their way. This need has been sorely felt for many years, but it will become especially vexing unless it is supplied before the week of the Shriners convention.

"That occasion will bring to Atlanta tens of thousands of visitors from every quarter of the Union. It is due them, as the city's guests, that they be spared the confusion and inconvenience which the lack of street signs would entail. Surely, Council will appreciate this urgent matter and give it due attention."

A government report says that Georgia and Florida have less malaria than any other southern states.

Two classes of people are conspicuous today—those who are in the Easter parade and those who watch it.

Huerta is so busy defending himself against Villa that he has quit trying to throw embarrassing obstacles in the way of Uncle Sam.

A Quietus for the Kickers.

IN the light of the facts and figures given out by the Reserve Bank Organization committee, New Orleans' fussy protest over not having been allotted a regional bank appears distinctly Pickwickian. In all kindness, we counsel the good Lady on the Gulf to hold her tongue till she regains her temper and to look realities honestly in the face instead of vainly denying their existence. It is but natural that she should be disappointed, as were a score or more of other cities, but for the life of us we cannot see why she should turn shrew and fall to scolding so good a neighbor and friend as Atlanta. Yet, we shall not fall out with New Orleans on this account. We are too mindful of her solid virtues to let her momentary choler in any way belaud the hearty admiration we have always felt for her people and their brilliant achievements. We are sure that she will recover her wonted poise and will realize in time that failure to secure a regional bank has not at all impeded or restricted her commercial growth. She will come to a clearer understanding of the purpose of federal reserve banks, will see that they are bankers' banks, not ordinary business banks, and that her everyday banking affairs and relationships will move on as freely and prosperously as ever.

Certain it is that the organization committee's reply to the criticism from New Orleans and other sulking cities is complete and unanswerable. We sincerely wish that conditions were such as to warrant the establishment of a reserve bank at New Orleans as well as at Atlanta, but the data presented by the committee shows that this could not be justified and that, as between the two cities, the interests of the district and the purpose of the new banking and currency law demanded the choice of Atlanta.

For one thing, the committee's list of national banks applying for membership favored Atlanta and Dallas over New Orleans in the districts of the Southeast and the Southwest. That was the decisive balance of opinion held by the bankers themselves and by business leaders generally. In this connection, the committee's direct statement is noteworthy: "The banks of Alabama desired to be connected either by Birmingham or Atlanta, only three expressing a first choice for New Orleans. The banks of Georgia desired to be connected with Atlanta, none expressing a first or second choice for New Orleans. Of forty-four banks in Florida, nineteen gave Atlanta as their first choice; only five expressed a first preference for New Orleans, and those were in the western corner. No bank in Tennessee expressed a first or second choice for New Orleans, while seven expressed a first choice for Atlanta, fourteen a second choice and thirteen a third choice. Generally speaking, the only banks desiring to be connected with New Orleans and expressing a first preference for her, were twenty-five of the twenty-six banks reporting in Louisiana and nineteen of the thirty-two in Mississippi. On a poll made from the controller's office of all banks expressing their preference as to the location for a federal reserve city, one hundred and twenty-four expressed a first preference for Atlanta (in this district) and only fifty-two for New Orleans. (Two hundred and thirty-two expressed a first preference for Dallas over New Orleans.)"

It is thus evident that the committee's decision squarely accords with the prevailing business judgment of the districts, and is, indeed, a direct expression of that judgment. The rank and file of the banking, industrial and commercial interests concerned knew that they could be served better from Atlanta than from New Orleans. Surely, then, there is no ground for complaint because the committee acted accordingly.

Not only the weight of business opinion but the preponderance of banking facts as well confirms the fairness and wisdom of the committee's decision. The official records of the United States treasury department show that in capital and surplus, loans and discounts and individual deposits, the national banks of Atlanta far exceed those of New Orleans. This point is made clear in the following table:

Not only the weight of business opinion but the preponderance of banking facts will confirm the fairness and wisdom of the committee's decision. The official records of the United States treasury department show that in capital and surplus, loans and discounts and individual deposits, the national banks of Atlanta far exceed those of New Orleans. This point is made clear in the following table:

	Capital and Surplus	Loans and Discounts	Individual Deposits.
Atlanta	$5,600,000	$26,038,000	$24,348,000
New Orleans	$6,730,000	$17,285,000	$16,857,000

Even more impressive, as the committee points out, is the comparative banking growth of the two cities from September, 1904, to March, 1914. During that period the capital and surplus of Atlanta's national banks increased from $2,410,000 to $5,600,000, a gain of two hundred and fifty-six per cent, while the capital and surplus of New Orleans' national banks increased from $6,250,000 to $6,730,000, a gain of only eight per cent. In loans and discounts the Atlanta banks advanced from $10,329,000 to $26,038,000, a gain of one hundred and fifty-two per cent, while the New Orleans banks decreased from $20,088,000 to $17,285,000, a loss of thirteen per cent. Likewise in individual deposits Atlanta's banks increased from $9,951,000 to $23,848,000, a gain of one hundred and forty-five per cent, while New Orleans' banks decreased from $19,425,000 to $16,857,000, a loss of thirteen per cent.

In the light of these figures, it is ridiculous to contend that as between Atlanta and New Orleans the former should not have been chosen as the location for a regional bank; and the comparative figures on Dallas and New Orleans are almost equally as strong in support of the committee's decision. New Orleans could not expect to be favored when the important facts in the case were all against her. She is evidently entitled to a branch bank and will probably be given one; and that will serve her needs just as well as a regional bank would have done. But there is no reason or grace in assailing the committee's report when it is grounded in facts that cannot be disputed.

Indeed, there is no room for logical complaint against any of the committee's apportionments. The secretary of the treasury, the secretary of agriculture and the controller of currency were all eminently fitted both in character and ability to perform the task assigned them. They heard the claims of some two hundred cities, of which thirty-seven were insistent applicants for bank headquarters; they heard the opinions of thousands of bankers and business men; and gathered authentic information concerning the needs and conditions of every quarter of the Union. It is but reasonable to believe, therefore, that they were better qualified than any one else could be to establish the districts and allot the banks in accordance with the country's common welfare. Their view was national and expert, while that of the few cities which are now protesting is necessarily local and inaccurate.

The committee's statement explaining just why Atlanta and Dallas were selected over New Orleans, why Richmond was chosen instead of Baltimore or Washington and Kansas City instead of Denver, effectually disposes of the clamor that has been heard. The suggestion that the committee's work may be undone or altered is absurd. The New York Journal of Commerce well says in this connection:

"It is not likely that any change will be made in the present districting, unless it should come from the action of Congress. The idea that Congress may intervene does not seem very probable when it is remembered that the great bulk of the banks appear to be satisfied with the districting, and that the present complaint is limited to a very small number of places. As for the idea that the reserve bank will probably bring about alterations, nothing at present seems less likely. Two of the organizing committee have seats on the board, and it is not probable that any such reversal as seems to be predicted in some quarters can be secured unless entirely new conditions develop themselves."

The fact is the Reserve Bank Organization committee has done its work pre-eminently well. It has satisfied the rank and file of business interests throughout the country; it has served the national welfare; it merits and is accorded the hearty admiration of the American people.

There's nothing so gloriously uncertain as a sure thing.

Asquith's Victory.

Premier Asquith was re-elected to the House of Commons last week without opposition, a fact of much significance when viewed in the light of its attending circumstances. The Premier had resigned his seat in order that he might legally accept the portfolio of Secretary for War. It was around that office that the Ulster crisis and the army crisis were most sharply defined. Colonel Seely, his former incumbent, had retired under the displeasure of his Liberal associates because he had yielded to certain army officers in their demand for government guarantees that they would not be called upon to employ force in putting down any rebellion which might develop in northeast Ireland. Mr. Asquith decided upon the bold course of assuming personal direction of the war office until its emergency should be unknotted. But since precedent, if not law, required him to resign from Parliament and stand for reelection, if he wished to remain in the Commons and at the same time hold a salaried cabinet post, he took the chance of an election.

Interestingly enough, however, the Unionists put forward no opposition candidate in his home constituency. They dared not do so on the issues of the hour. The Premier stood squarely for the supremacy of Parliament over the army; he stood also, as a Liberal leader, for Irish Home Rule. On neither of these questions was the Unionist party in a position to question his leadership. Therefore, while the election was local in character, the fact that he was unopposed indicated the changed attitude of the Unionists as to the further resistance to the Home Rule policy. It seems, indeed, that the bill granting Ireland the right to self-government in its internal affairs will soon become a law without further agitation. Ulster will doubtless accept the compromises offered by the Liberals and Nationalists, and what once threatened to be a tempest of civil war will pass harmlessly away.

The average man wants to do all the sinning for his family.

Editorials in Brief

Let the Interstate Commerce commission decide the rate increase first. Then let it deal with the administrative abuses that have come to light in the management of certain railroads. That is a simple and common sense program. Government has no more important function than the restoration of credit and confidence by the strict exercise of lawful powers. When the railroads are asking for a small increase in freight rates as a matter of financial life or death, and the great body of shippers are willing to pay the increased rates for the sake of the stimulation they will give to business in general, why should government block the way? And more especially, why should government block the way when these increased rates can be withdrawn whenever it is found that the railroads no longer need them?—New York World.

Referring to the President's "matters of nearer consequence and greater delicacy," Senator Branham says: "I have not found any man anywhere who understands what in the world that language means." The Inner Parliament

BY DR. FRANK CRANE.
(Copyright, 1914, by Frank Crane.)

Inside the human breast is a parliament. When you consider whether or not you will do a certain thing there is always an inward consultation, sometimes orderly, sometimes turbulent. You are, as it were, the speaker in your child's mind at Dromedary. But the decision in the case of every one of us is accompanied by many voices.

The Wild is the Judge upon the bench. Each voice is a personification, a personified desire. The question arises, "Shall I do a certain thing?" DESIRE speaks up. It has but one word, but that is a tremendous one. It is "I WANT TO." It speaks loudly, its tones echo. The whole body trembles, as though for DESIRE its speaker is the body.

Then comes CONSCIENCE. It speaks for the spirit as DESIRE for the body. It says "I ought," "I ought not." DESIRE and CONSCIENCE argue hotly. Here enters a third voice, that of REASON. Sometimes it is the bribed lawyer of DESIRE. Sometimes it is the attorney of the soul. It takes volubly, subtly, giving excuses, citing examples, adducing palliations.

Now perhaps FEAR steps forward. It presents consequences of pain, of loss, of shame. It warns the body against results of yielding to desire; it warns the spirit against the high price of nobleness. IMAGINATION takes the floor. It has no real reason. It presents pictures, now beautiful, enticing, as it sides with DESIRE; now appalling as it sides with REASON.

LOVE rises to speak. It takes the argument out of chaos and places the welfare of another. How will the loved one be affected? Will it hurt or please him or her? The Will must wait that plea. LOVE speaks in the name of the heart. It says, "What will they think of you? Will they praise or blame, reward or punish? No one is wholly indifferent to the judgment of others."

Other voices take part. PRIDE has its say. DUTY comes into the arena. Ambition is bold and seducing, proposing. CAUTION shakes its warning finger. LOVE OF EASE has a tone that is persuasive. And pure MISCHIEF is not always silent.

Besides, there is that Voice which Hugo so aptly calls the "voice of the senses." Let us call it where Jean Valjean is arguing with himself whether to be base or noble. He speaks of it as a deep Voice, "the voice of the soul."

Unfortunate are those human creatures whose inner parliament is but a riotous mob, in whom decision is reached by the law of the majority. And fortunate they whose inward debates are orderly, whose Will is a sober and upright judge, whose desires are ordered and whose judgments stand.

WHAT THE YEARS BRING

By Mrs. Minnie E. Hogan

Yes—as some one has said: "The years bring their own recompense—diary, understanding, tolerance, a mellowing of head and heart."

First, charity—love, that great something that comes into your life, touching, edifying, touching, or chiding in the heart as if touched by an invisible and sympathetic spirit of another world, creating that noble desire by which we strive to do good. It is the desire to love and help all of God's children. You are created for love. Love is the life of the heart. It comes through grief, wrong, mistakes, disappointment, the fire that separates the dross from the true metal. It is the life of the heart, and sympathy for their weak points of character.

Second, the years bring with the tongue of men and angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the tongue, I have not understanding. I have the knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing. I have become as a clanging cymbal. I have the knowledge, and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing. I have become as a clanging cymbal.

Third, the years bring with the tongue of men and angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the tongue, I have not understanding. I have the knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing. I have become as a clanging cymbal.

Fourth, the years bring with the tongue of men and angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the tongue, I have not understanding. I have the knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing. I have become as a clanging cymbal.

Fifth, the years bring with the tongue of men and angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the tongue, I have not understanding. I have the knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing. I have become as a clanging cymbal.

Sixth, the years bring with the tongue of men and angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the tongue, I have not understanding. I have the knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing. I have become as a clanging cymbal.

Seventh, the years bring with the tongue of men and angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the tongue, I have not understanding. I have the knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing. I have become as a clanging cymbal.

Eighth, the years bring with the tongue of men and angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the tongue, I have not understanding. I have the knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing. I have become as a clanging cymbal.

Ninth, the years bring with the tongue of men and angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the tongue, I have not understanding. I have the knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing. I have become as a clanging cymbal.

Tenth, the years bring with the tongue of men and angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal. And though I have the tongue, I have not understanding. I have the knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing. I have become as a clanging cymbal.

THE FEDERAL CITY

BY FRÉDÉRIC J. HAKIN.
VIII.—REBUILDING IN 1914.

The second period of the history of the Federal establishment in the District of Columbia began with the rebuilding of the Capitol and the restoration of the White House. At that time the fortunes of the city were at their lowest ebb. The failure of the original plan of the Federal City, the location was found to be unhealthy and visitors from abroad, members of the Congress and the President, had been disappointed by the pretentious plan and its failure to develop. The rebuilding of the Capitol and the restoration of the White House had been practically completed, and it was realized that the growth of the city would be slow.

The decision of the Congress not to remove the Capitol elsewhere but to restore the buildings damaged by the fire in 1861, the construction of the city in 1828 it had become certain that Washington would have to depend for its prosperity almost exclusively on its character as the seat of the Federal Government, and that commerce and manufacturing would be dependent upon to make Washington a great city.

It seems to have been the view of the Congress that the property owned by the United States in the city and the Federal Government was so large that the Federal Government would be a source of embarrassment rather than a source of aid and profit. Large numbers of the buildings had been in successive years along the Potomac, and the Federal Government was so large that the Federal Government would be a source of embarrassment rather than a source of aid and profit.

In the eastern part of the city over 2,000,000 square feet of land had been mapped for streets and building squares which was entirely under water, and building squares which was entirely under water, and building squares which was entirely under water.

After the first quarter of a century of its existence Washington had few features that impressed the visitor. The city was a collection of small, isolated groups of buildings, and the Federal Government was so large that the Federal Government would be a source of embarrassment rather than a source of aid and profit.

In 1821 Congress took a view of these conditions and directed the division of such lands as were owned by the Federal Government into blocks of land, and the Federal Government was so large that the Federal Government would be a source of embarrassment rather than a source of aid and profit.

It was urged at an early date that the proper procedure on behalf of the United States with reference to the Federal City was to sell the Federal City as soon as possible and hold the remainder for the Federal Government. Congress, however, seems never to have had in mind the probable increase in the value of Washington property with one result that the Federal Government was so large that the Federal Government would be a source of embarrassment rather than a source of aid and profit.

It was also thought that the reservations which had been made for its public squares were more than sufficient for the possible growth of the Federal City. The Federal Government was so large that the Federal Government would be a source of embarrassment rather than a source of aid and profit.

These demands were not only on the amount of land in the city which had been reserved for Federal purposes and on the number of building lots which remained to the government, but on the amount of land which had been removed from taxation by the annual sale of the Federal City. The Federal Government was so large that the Federal Government would be a source of embarrassment rather than a source of aid and profit.

In 1878 Congress acceded to this demand, in view of the constant increase in the value of the Federal City. The Federal Government was so large that the Federal Government would be a source of embarrassment rather than a source of aid and profit.

The entire District of Columbia is now under municipal government, and the proportion of taxable land is much greater than the holdings of the United States. The Federal Government was so large that the Federal Government would be a source of embarrassment rather than a source of aid and profit.

The next letter of this series will be devoted to a description of the "plant" of the United States as a Federal City. The Federal Government was so large that the Federal Government would be a source of embarrassment rather than a source of aid and profit.

The dawn comes cold; the haystack smokes. The green twigs crackle in the fire. The dew is on the grass, and the sun is in the sky. The Federal Government was so large that the Federal Government would be a source of embarrassment rather than a source of aid and profit.

Down in the town a clock strikes six. The gray east heaven burns and glows. The sun is in the sky, and the sun is in the sky. The Federal Government was so large that the Federal Government would be a source of embarrassment rather than a source of aid and profit.

Beyond the stack where we have lain. The road runs twisted like a snake. The road runs twisted like a snake. The Federal Government was so large that the Federal Government would be a source of embarrassment rather than a source of aid and profit.

W. J. HARRIS MAY ENTER CONTEST FOR GOVERNOR

Census Director Seriously Considers Request of Friends to Announce for Office

WASHINGTON, April 11.—William J. Harris, chairman of the state Democratic executive committee and director of the United States census, is seriously considering entering the race for governor of Georgia. It is expected Mr. Harris may issue a statement in the near future outlining his future course and those who enjoy his confidence would not be surprised if this takes the shape of a formal announcement for governor.

Mr. Harris has been mentioned prominently as a possible candidate for some weeks and on his return from Georgia he found scores and scores of letters from all sections of the state urging him to enter the lists.

"I have been much gratified at the heavy correspondence," said he tonight, "but I have no definite statement to make."

Mr. Harris is one of the best known and most successful of the younger politicians in Georgia. As a member of the state senate from Polk county, he has a commanding position in the general assembly several years ago. Subsequently he was prominent as a leader in the Wilson movement in Georgia, and as director of the census, a position to which he was appointed by the president, he has made a record of which his friends are proud.

Judge W. E. Thomas is Indorsed for Governor

A mass meeting of the Democratic voters of Thomas county, held here this morning, a resolution was adopted indorsing Judge W. E. Thomas, of the southern circuit, as the people's candidate for governor without reference to any section or division of the state.

Judge Thomas is very strong here and if he enters the race will carry the vote of the county. It was also decided that the county primary of Thomas will be held on August 19, at same time as the state primary.

Monroe County Primary Will Be Held August 19

FOURTH, Ga., April 11.—The Monroe county Democratic executive committee has set the county primary for August 19, the date for the state primary.

In adopting the regulations for this primary, the committee passed some stringent provisions governing the conduct of candidates and their "strickers." The candidates must remain dumb on the day of the primary, for, says the committee, "no candidate shall work or act as a dictator in his behalf, or discuss his candidacy, or have others do so for him, at the voting place in any district on the day of the primary election."

Bad cigars, treats, etc., so dear to the hearts of candidates, are tabooed, and the candidates are not even allowed to provide transportation for their friends to and from the precincts. The committee puts its foot down on this matter of "influence" in the following words:

"No candidate, helper, or representative of a candidate shall stand by any place on said election day and solicit votes nor work on the election booth in behalf of any candidate nor shall any candidate provide means for voters to ride to or from the election place, nor furnish directly or indirectly, money, treats, cigars, financial or other aid to influence voters, or otherwise in election day or at any time between the day of the election and the day of the primary."

The committee seems determined to have the primary on August 19 free of any undue influence which would prevent the freest and truest expression of the untrammelled will of the sovereign people.

"I'm in the Race to Win," Says Dr. L. G. Hardman

Dr. L. G. Hardman, of Commerce, has just issued a formal announcement to the effect that he is running for governor in the primary election on August 19, and that he is not a candidate for any other office.

Commenting upon his candidacy for the governorship Dr. Hardman said: "I am in the race to win. Since my announcement I have received hundreds of letters of support from leading citizens of all parts of the state. I am highly encouraged by the manner in which the people have accepted my candidacy. It is my purpose to engage in an aggressive campaign, during which I will make a number of speeches."

Dr. Hardman has not yet decided where he will open his campaign headquarters, but it is quite likely that he will direct his campaign from Atlanta, because of the accessibility of this city to all portions of the state.

Felder Hasn't Mapped Out His Speaking Itinerary

Attorney General Thomas S. Felder has not yet decided just when or where he will make the first speech in his campaign for the United States senate. He has for his campaign plans until after he resigns the office of attorney general on April 15, when he would go to Macon, Ga., to his campaign headquarters and prepare his speaking itinerary.

"I am going to win this race," he said. "I am more than gratified at the response I have followed my announcement. It is my intention to meet the people face to face, and to speak in as many sections of the state as possible. I will tell the people where I stand on all questions and will openly discuss the issues with them. I have endorsed my resignation as attorney general because I felt that it would be unjust to the state for me to hold on to that office while I was campaigning for another. Had I not resigned I would have been necessary for me to other neglect the state's business or neglect my campaign."

Evster Rabbits Vie With Hats And Lilies for First Honor

MARY HILL BLOODWORTH AND THE WHITE RABBIT.

When two little girls grabbed him by the ears yesterday.

The two little girls were Mary Hill Bloodworth and Alice Greene and they just happened to see the White Rabbit cuddling in a case outside of McMillan's store, with a number of other girls who were white and black and brown.

So they opened the case door without so much as "your leave" and hugged the White Rabbit while he kicked and whined in one long cry: "Kiss with blue spots on 'em, White Rabbit, don't make 'em hard-boiled, either, and be sure the color won't look off."

The White Rabbit only kicked the harder and wiggled his pink nose till it became a quiver; but there is no doubt he understood, for Mary Hill and Alice were quite satisfied and declared the White Rabbit was "just too sweet."

Being a very timid sort of individual with pink eyes and a nose that whimpers, the White Rabbit probably doesn't realize his importance and certainly was scared to the end of his whiskers.

POLICE BOARD IS STILL DEACOCKED ON CHAIRMAN

Indications Are Second Effort to Elect Next Tuesday Night Will Fail

The board of police commissioners next Tuesday night will make a second effort to elect a chairman, and the present indications are that it will be no more successful than the first effort, which terminated in the board and next day after 145 ballots had been taken.

The line up of the board is the same today as on the night of the second Tuesday in March, when it tried to elect a chairman and failed, this line up being as follows:

For W. P. Fain—A. H. Baskin, W. P. Fain, R. Lee Smith, George E. Johnson, Clark R. King, George B. Dixon—C. For R. T. Pace—R. T. Pace, Robert C. Anderson, R. Colcord, Mayor James G. Woodward.

For W. A. Vernoy—W. A. Vernoy, C. G. Campbell—C. G. Campbell, W. A. Vernoy, C. G. Campbell.

There are twelve members of the board and it takes a majority, which is seven, to elect a chairman.

Thus, with nine up as it stands above, no candidate has a majority; and no long as this line up continues, no chairman can be elected.

And so long as the board fails to elect Mayor Woodward will act as chairman, exercising all the rights and prerogatives of the regular chairman of the board. A deadlock in the police board over the election of a chairman is no new thing, and years ago the framers of the rules governing the board's procedure, providing that in the event of a deadlock the mayor shall provide, so that the ordinary routine business will not be held up.

Inasmuch as W. A. Vernoy has the fewest number of votes he has naturally been expected to be the first candidate who would retire, and he has done so. But Mr. Vernoy states that he has not any desire of retiring. Neither has Mr. Fain, nor Mr. Pace. So there the matter stands.

Rheumatic Throat Is Common Trouble Should Be Treated in Blood To Prevent Recurrence.

There are successful gargles that stop soreness in the throat, but they are dangerous if used for a long time, as they influence the functions of the body to neutralize the irritants or wash them out and to stimulate their exertion through the proper channels.

Rheumatic sore throat is a dangerous condition, as it is a sign that the blood is loaded with more virus than it can stand, and it may lead to the most serious complications.

POULTRY, PIGEONS AND LIVE STOCK Some Things Important for Farmers To Know

CONKEY SAYS:
A traveling over the state any one cannot help but be impressed with the tremendous amount of work that the farmers have already done in the past season. I have never before seen so much land so thoroughly prepared and so ready to take place.

It is a pleasure to see the beautiful fields of grain scattered all over the state, how forward it is and the splendid prospects now in sight for probably the greatest grain crop this state has ever harvested. The farm lands have been thoroughly prepared and made ready to receive the fertilizer and seed. There ought to be much land broken so that the farmer can get the most out of it. It is one item that the farmer must not overlook if he is to get the best results from his land.

Do not put the fertilizer too deep down in the furrow and throw a bag of it on the ground, if you do the plants will never get full benefit of the fertilizer. In fact, the fertilizer should be placed in the furrow and the grain should be sown in the furrow. The fertilizer should be placed in the furrow and the grain should be sown in the furrow. The fertilizer should be placed in the furrow and the grain should be sown in the furrow.

LOCATED in one of the best growing sections, we have these beautiful lots at less than one-half of their real value; fronting on three good streets and one given; within one block of car line, schools, churches, stores, etc. 15 minutes' ride from center of city, on one of our main boulevards. Has water, sewer, electricity, curbing, tile sidewalk in front of one block of the property. Can sell six lots on one of the streets for $7,500—there isn't a single lot in the thirty that won't bring $600. This property is surrounded by nice homes and high-class people. Terms $3,000 cash and balance yearly. Call at office for particulars. If you can't double your money on this, don't you buy it.

ABOUT 7 ACRES OF BEAUTIFUL GROVE

BETWEEN BUCKHEAD and PIEDMONT AVENUE, fronting 400 feet on Peachtree road and running back about 1,000 feet to another road; this is a very attractive proposition in many respects; fine for a subdivision, or can sell off half of the front and all of the back, retaining a lot 200x500 to build on; or would make a magnificent summer house; has on it a good two-story summer house; very large rooms, plenty of porches, screened and enclosed with glass all around; bath, sewer, water, electricity, vapor heat, garage, chicken house, side drive, plenty of shade. In fact, a lovely place, and should appeal to anyone wanting a country-city home. Call at office for price and let's talk it over. Don't phone. See W. R. Turman.

Young Women's Christian Association Is Offered Locations for New Building, and Although Plans Are Indefinite, It Seems That It Will Begin a Campaign for Greater Institution Here—Small Sales Announced Yesterday

Those who followed with so much interest the whittling down of the Y. M. C. A., which resulted finally in the erection of a 10-story, $250,000 building on Luckie street, will be interested in the announcement that the Young Women's Christian Association is now working along the same lines. So far the plans of the organization seem to be rather indefinite as to the character of the building, but they have taken such definite shape that the organization is in the market for a location.

Apparently that the Y. W. C. A. bought a property on West Baker street, which was announced at that time, would be its future home.

Whether the association would buy a location outright, or use the Baker street property as part payment, was not known just at this time.

J. D. McMillan reports the following sales:

For James Luther Campbell, 48 Piedmont place, a lot and 8-room house, to J. D. Bentley, for $3,000.

To J. N. Nolan, a farm and water mill in the beginning of the highway from J. W. Reeves, 51 Melrose avenue, Oakhurst 1 lot and 6-room bungalow, for $2,500.

To James Luther Campbell, a 12-acre tract, for $10,000.

FRUIT EXCHANGE GIVES INFORMATION ON CROPS

President W. R. Hunter, of the Georgia Fruit Exchange, has given a most illuminating and convincing account of the features of the Georgia Fruit exchange. He presents much interesting data and facts showing the need of proper handling and distribution of the peach crop through the medium of this organization. The article is published in the Georgia Fruit Exchange.

Now that the peach crop season has passed safely through the lightning season, the Georgia Fruit Exchange is now in a position to give the growers the greatest benefit of the Georgia Fruit exchange. He presents much interesting data and facts showing the need of proper handling and distribution of the peach crop through the medium of this organization. Mr. Reaves Has Been Working the City Trade for 2 Years—There Are 300 City Salesmen Now to 50 When He First Began—Retail District Was Confined Principally to Four Streets

J. W. Reeves, who has been working the city trade for the last 4 years as a horse salesman, is one of the men who for the past 18 years has been continuously with the Gershon Brothers company, wholesale dealers in wooden ware, is one of the war horses among the pioneer city salesmen of Atlanta.

He and his son, Henry W. Reeves, cover the city trade for Gershon Brothers and make a team hard to beat, with the experience of the father and the enthusiasm of the son.

"When I first began work as a salesman," said Mr. Reeves, "Atlanta had a population of only about 55,000 and one man could easily work the road to the Georgia coast. There were no corners in the residence, streets and the retail district was confined principally to Peachtree street, Whitehall, Decatur, Marietta and West Mitchell streets and the stores were scattered in the residence part of the city as there were business houses on the main streets in those days.

CORRESPONDENCE CARDS ARE IN GREAT DEMAND

Stationery Trade Finds Cards Now in High Favor With Consumers

A tendency of the trade in the stationery business that is becoming quite marked is the demand for correspondence cards.

With the experience of the S. F. Richards company taken as an index it can be said that the popularity of this stationery is now at its height.

This firm states that one-fourth of their entire sales of box paper this season have consisted of these cards, while two years ago they did not make more than a tenth of the business.

The cards, known in the trade also by the name of "separate cards," are used for short notes and come in all colors as with the regular note paper.

railroad, the Louisville and Nashville, and the Western and Atlantic roads that have never recognized the 2-cent mileage, that in the near future their roads will adopt the 2-cent mileage plan of the other carriers, and the traveling men will thus have the 2-cent rate throughout the south which includes the territory south of the Potomac and east of the Mississippi. Interchangeable mileage will be restored in ten days and the coupon stopover tickets will be put on not later than June 1.

"I am satisfied and delighted with the new plan and I am sure that all the traveling men, when become thoroughly familiar with the new system, will be convinced that it is the solution of the mileage system and that it will meet with their hearty approval. It is wonderful in its simplicity and I feel that the carriers have at last recognized the traveling men as the most valuable patrons and are now willing to consult with us for the mutual interest to both parties."

Shackelford Thanked For Mileage Victory

The following letter was received by H. D. Shackelford from George A. Gerstner, prominent member of the A. C. T., with reference to the mileage agreement:

Dear Sir and Brother:

It was with a great deal of pleasure that I received the announcement in the press of your successful work for the traveling public. Every loyal member of the U. C. T. as well as the public generally, should tender you a vote of thanks for your interest in their behalf. The writer knows the enormous amount of work that you have done in this matter and as a member of the organization wishes to extend to you his sincere thanks and appreciation for your efforts in this most deserving cause.

Sincerely and Fraternally yours,

Tells of Their Open-Handed Generosity at Home and on Road

Editor Firing Line:

If I could write a eulogy, it would be on the traveling man. With all his splendid, noble traits of character, the world knows very little about him. His character, his personality, his salesmanship, his all round good qualities are often misunderstood and underestimated.

As I sat in the convention hall of the Travelers' Protective association at Columbus last week I thought of the traveling man in a thousand different ways. There he was struggling and striving for uplift of humanity, the noble good, his progressiveness, his untiring efforts to bring about better conditions.

Surely the time will come when he will be more clearly and more definitely understood if not better rewarded. As a whole traveling man is the most optimistic set of men that can be found and carry sunshine and success with them everywhere they go. They believe in the future and the great present. They think success, that success in an earnest, honest, faithful, thoughtful way that is effective, helpful and so beneficial to others.

STOP-OVER TICKETS PROVE HAPPY WAY OF ENDING LONG FIGHT

Example. "You and I both purchase tickets to Dalton, at the Atlanta ticket office. Both of us want to go to Dalton, you direct without stopping. I want to stop at a half dozen stations on the way. Now if the roads will sell me a ticket with these stop-over privileges with sufficient time to make my destination I will concede no further complaint is justified, as we would then be on a parity."

"Later I made this statement to Mr. J. S. Richardson, chairman of the Southern Railway Passenger association, stating it would solve the whole interchange problem. He communicated my views as expressed to the various passenger agents and traffic managers, who at once called a conference with Mr. Shackelford and myself. The suggestion was with unanimity accepted and agreed to.

"I was fortunate in being able to speak at this conference, both from the standpoint of the traveling man and a former railroad transportation man. These carriers do not regard stop-over privileges as a concession, but as a right of the traveling man in the interest of their patrons, but recognized the great benefit to themselves in concentrating their accounting in the hands of their most capable agents at terminals, taking this responsibility and labor off the men's shoulders who necessarily agents who are not near so capable as employed.

"Hence my belief is that they will make this plan operative throughout the southern territory, and perhaps other passenger associations will gladly concede this rule, for while it is true we (the traveling men), got all we wanted, but the roads will also be greatly benefited.

Mr. Shackelford rendered most valuable aid in our efforts and the Traffic Commercial Travelers are fortunate in having a man of his ability as their representative."

SAMPLES AND SHIPMENTS

ON THE ROAD AND IN THE OFFICE WITH ATLANTA'S BUSY ARMY OF COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS

The "ins" at Pains & Stamps yesterday were Cliff Edwards, W. A. Bailey and E. E. Smith. Ben Thompson, of this firm, paid a visit to headquarters last Thursday.

The E. L. Adams company since beginning the summer custom of closing on Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock has changed the hours of its Saturday salesmen's meeting from 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon to 10:30 o'clock in the morning.

Bill Gaston, of Pains & Stamps, accompanied by his wife and daughter, left today to spend the week-end with relatives at Villa Rica, Ga.

Max Samuels, who travels Mississippi for the Hirschberg company, says Atlanta is 1,400 feet above the sea level. He looks good to him at the recent flood experience at Jackson, Miss., where the water rose to a three-foot depth in his hotel while he perched on it to keep his feet dry.

Mr. Samuels is largely occupied with Masonry work and will be in Atlanta several weeks.

A. J. Bruce, representing the Thomas L. Lipton tea and coffees, was a visitor at Pains & Stamps Saturday after a trip to the territory about McLean and Eastman, Ga.

Boykin R. Pennington, former traveler for the Ragan-Malone company, now representing the company of Lynchburg, Va., was calling on some of his friends among the Atlanta salesmen yesterday. He is much pleased with his new connection.

A. S. Harris who is working in southern Alabama for the A. M. Robinson company is having the best business he has had since he returned to this home about a year ago.

W. J. Armstrong, new man on the Georgia road for the Hirschberg company, is reported by this column to be doing well.

Jack Daniel has been doing two men's work down the Georgia road. His team-mates, from the territory, Sam Hines, has been kept in Atlanta for the last two weeks by the serious illness of his wife. She is much improved and Mr. Hines will be among his customers again this week.

The first shoe salesman to use an auto around Atlanta was W. N. Nichols, city man for the Gramling-Spalding company. It looked like he might have to return to the trolley for a temporary relief when an express wagon moved started in on his car last week.

While it was standing in front of the company's place and chewed up a corner of the top covering before he was stopped.

C. J. Williamson, of the Hirschberg-Willamson-Wright company, has returned from a short south Georgia trip. Evidence is everywhere of a fine peach crop in that section this year, he says.

Adolf and Will Montag will spend the next three weeks in New York buying holiday goods. The firm's headquarters new sample room will be ready by the time the new stock arrives.

There are still plenty of merchants who need more information about Atlanta. Jesse F. Tate, the hat salesman with Brown, Perryman & Green, Co., a merchant in a South Carolina village who, noting the announcement of the regional bank for Atlanta, inquired blantly if the town didn't have one bank already.

T. B. Fowler, popular city man of the Capital City Tobacco company, who has been kept at home by illness for the last two weeks, is improving, but is still unable to be out. W. E. Parks is looking after both his own and Mr. Fowler's territory.

Working mail order business has been keeping the Orr Shoe company's forces working extra hours during the last several days.

J. N. Alexius, special representative of the M. Hirschberg company, is on a trip among the larger towns of South Carolina and Georgia with M. J. Diemmer, of the Capital City Tobacco company.

George E. Morgan, manager of the Atlanta Coffee Mills company, has returned from New Orleans, where he found the principal topic among the coffee people is the high prices of the last few weeks.

A carload order from George S. Blount was one of the good things of the week at the White Hickory Wagon Manufacturing company.

With two leaders get together on a trip a good string of orders must be the result. C. C. Phillips and T. B. Lewis, of the Capital City Tobacco company, are doing team work in south Georgia for a short period to show just what can be done in selling tobacco.

For a three-month visit to his home, the S. P. Richards company, E. S. Harrison stopped over in Atlanta one day last week. With health much improved and good conditions in his territory, he is going strong now.

W. T. Heath and C. A. Clifford, the road men of the H. L. Slinger company, are prizing the spring in the way of these two new alert travelers. I. E. Blake, the shipping clerk, has already had to turn little more steam on his always high pressure activity.

Frank Baker, the recent addition to the Gramling-Spalding staff who is in the south Georgia territory, is reported by his house to have made a good get-away and landing fall orders at a pace that will push some of the old regulars.

T. K. Johnston, sales manager of the John Deere Plow company, will return tomorrow from a several days' stay at Savannah.

M. W. Geiselman paid a visit to headquarters last week and as all the talk at the John Deere office is of the new building, they are to have, his customers can look out for a great deal of his fund of enthusiasm spent on these lines for the next week or so.

Speaking of sales far from home, an Atlanta concern's man out in Texas, M. J. Kent, of the Rosenfeld company, is greeting spring with sales of blankets that are liable to break all records of this concern on this item before the season is over.

H. V. McCord, Sr., made a two-day business trip down the Georgia road last week.

L. C. Scott, representative of the Lawson Manufacturing company of New Holston, Wis., makers of the Lawson Fast King gasoline engine, was a visitor last week at the W. J. Dabney implement company. Mr. Scott was delighted with the prospect for sales of his engines in the south. "The use of gasoline engines is fast increasing every-

NEW BROKERAGE FIRM

L. B. Morgan, Jr., and D. M. Thornton Form Partnership to Handle Groceries

A new brokerage firm, the Morgan-Thornton company, composed of L. B. Morgan, Jr., and D. M. Thornton, has entered the local field to deal principally in grocery specialties.

With about twenty-five manufacturers' accounts, and a wide acquaintance in local trade circles, the new firm starts with a bright future. It will carry a strong line of canned goods and cover the state with them. Both members of the firm are young men, experienced in dealing with the grocery trade. Mr. Morgan through his connection with the American Bakeries corporation of Atlanta as salesman, and Mr. Thornton through several years with the N. K. Fairbanks company in Atlanta and T. L. Is his home and Mississippi has had many friends here who will watch the progress of the new firm with much interest.

The concern has offices at 213 Atlanta National bank building.

AGRICULTURAL WORKS TO ADD BIG FLOOR SPACE

Lets Contract for Building 40,000 Square Feet to Its Immense Plant

The Atlanta Agricultural works on Friday let a contract for an addition to its plant of 40,000 square feet of floor space. Business has been so heavy with the company during this season that it finds its plant inadequate to take care of the constantly increasing demand, and have found it necessary to build this addition to the plant.

GRAMLING-SPALDING CO. DOES BIG EASTER TRADE

The Gramling-Spalding company report an excellent Easter trade, their shipping department having been kept busy every night last week filling rush orders, many of which were sent by express.

Ga. Dr. Carlisle, of Carrollton, Ga.; H. B. Barrett, of Apopka, Ga.; Dr. H. V. Newman, Ga.; W. E. Jacobs, of Loganville, Ga. An opening bill order was taken from Dr. Power, of Rowlett, Georgia.

Down at the McCord-Stewart company last week there was much rejoicing over the fact that the fruit crop escaped a freeze during the recent cold snap. A big fruit crop means a big demand for fruit jars which this company handles, and besides a good fruit yield means wide prosperity for many of the richest sections of Georgia and the south.

Among visitors to the Lamar & Rankin Drug Co. last week were the following: Dr. Bowdoin, of Adairville, where in the southern states," said he. "In fact the south is a wonderful country and its development is just beginning upon the long era of progress which is before it."

W. R. Simpson of Jones Brothers & Co. spent the latter part of last week at Montgomery taking orders for his company's pickles, preserves and vinegars. C. M. McKain of this company secured a car load shipment at Albany last week while E. E. Dawson spent the week working the retail trade at Tampa, Fla., with the salesmen of C. B. Witt & Co., wholesale grocers of that city.

The March business of the W. J. Dabney implement company showed a 23.1 per cent increase over March of last year. The spring business of this company has been unusually strong and the year 1914 bids fair to show a wide margin over the entire year of 1913.

M. Lehman, who has been for several months working local territory with salesmen of the Lamar & Rankin Drug Co. on a campaign with a new car, has returned to New York. He has made friends here who hope to see him back in this field again.

WHAT WILL THE CHURCH COMMISSION DO ABOUT STYLES IN GEORGIA?

HALF the ministers at last week's evangelical conference, where all the Protestant denominations met, had forgotten that the Georgia churches have commissioned a committee to investigate new styles and new fashions and decide what's to be done about them.

But not more than two weeks ago the commission met in Atlanta and appointed Dr. C. B. Wilmer, pastor of St. Luke's, as a subcommittee of one to make the investigation himself and suggest to the commission the best course to pursue.

It was last November that the different Protestant denominations, at their separate state conventions, adopted resolutions agreeing that a joint commission should be appointed to create a public sentiment against new fads that are objectionable.

The Georgia Baptist convention, at its session in Gainesville, adopted resolutions, deploring "the immoral dances, the circus and suggestive styles in women's dress, and the general lack of refinement and courtesy indulged in by many young people of our state."

The Presbyterian and Methodist churches adopted similar resolutions, and the Episcopal church, without rejecting modern dances, women's dress, or sex dramas, viewed "with alarm the widespread laxity of social usages and calls upon the clergy and laity alike to use all influence to prevent and example to correct these errors."

Styles Unchanged.

After these resolutions were adopted and the conventions had adjourned, styles remained as they were except for a ruffle added midway between the bottom and top hem.

And as for sex dramas, Atlanta had, among others, "Bella Donna," which recognized no problem at all and contrasted itself with a realistic picture—boat boys waiting behind the scenes while the wife poisoned her husband.

The question of dress, dance and theater, have remained largely undisturbed, as far as the church commission is concerned, except for the immediate effect of the resolutions that were adopted and published.

But, while the existence of the commission has dropped out of notice and its activity has been delayed, its work really has just begun. Dr. Wilmer, as representative of the commission, will make his recommendations, the commission will refer its plan to the various churches, and the effort to discourage "laxity of social usages," and that no specific protest will be made against styles or dances.

Control the Children.

The resolutions adopted by the Baptist convention may be addressed to the various churches as a wise statement containing good counsel. In speaking of unbecoming fashions to dress and manner, the convention resolved:

"First, That this convention is earnestly and emphatically opposed to these things and, as we believe, the fault lies mainly with the parents in the lack of control of their children, we earnestly and affectionately, in our Master's name, urge the fathers and mothers who are members of our churches, to see to it that these evils be taken away from the lives of our children."

"Second, We request all our members to resist, but at the same time tactfully, and in the spirit of our Master, preach and teach against their daily intercourse with the members of other churches."

"Third, We call upon the Godly women of our churches, in their individual and general conversations, to take this problem up earnestly and faithfully that their great influence may be exerted in suppressing these evils."

"Impertinent," Says Mrs. McLendon

At the time the state conventions met, she said last week, "that skirts are going to become broader, and that in six months time you won't see any more that are slit."

"The same people that used to come to me and say, 'Now, I want to be made just as ridiculous as you can make me,' are asking for fuller skirts."

"One thing Mrs. McLendon said was very true and very much to the point. As she put it, men make the styles now, women have to wear them—they've got to wear something—and then men pose as the critics."

Men Are at Fault.

"There are other ways men are to blame, too. I was telling one the other day that they cause women to dress outlandishly, and he couldn't understand why. Then, I explained. "As I told him, you see a knot of men on the street corner, and a girl passes by who's dressed modestly—just as she ought to be. And do they notice her? Not any more than they notice the church paper when they get home and there's the sporting page of today's daily paper handy. But if she's dressed in a tight skirt and gaudy colors, they all look at her. Well, a woman's a woman. She wants to be noticed. It's natural, isn't it?"

"Now, look how things used to be. A girl stayed at home and baked and sewed, and the one that made the best bread and was handiest with the needle was the one that had all the beaux on Sunday night. The girl that was frivolous and daddled about and didn't know anything wasn't noticed."

"Well, women began to find out that men didn't like them any better for learning to be good housewives and real home-makers, and so they changed their habits. And now you hear mankind longing for the old-fashioned girl. Pah!"

"One of the surest things about the fashions right now," went on Miss Bowie, "is that they're going to change. Fickleness is their characteristic. And my opinion is that the change is back to conservatism. I can see that the tendency is toward more sensible and becoming styles of dress, although maybe the slights you see on the streets don't go to show that."

Dancing to Become Stately.

"Nevertheless, women are already asking for wider skirts, and I am confident that by fall it will be apparent that styles are returning to the old sane, common-sense fashions. In six months' time there won't be any more slit skirts."

But the church commission is not concerned merely with dress, but also with all the other fashions—dances, the theater and social usages in general.

As for dancing, the teachers say it is tending every day toward the graceful and the so-called aesthetic and away from the crude steps danced to ragtime.

Mrs. Wayne Wilson, who studied dancing last year in various European cities, predicts that along with the summer and fall importations that reach Atlanta by way of New York will be steps that express nothing more than the rhythm of music which is semi-classical.

The phases of dancing rebuked by the church will soon fall into decay, she believes. "The tango as it has been danced here," she said, "has been more of a romp than a dance. But it is now beginning to have the grace and the stateliness of the minuet. The trou-

It Used to Be That the Girl That Baked the Best Bread and Was Handiest With the Needle Had All the Beaus on Sunday Night. But It's Different Now."

the most good will be done by the organizations of theatergoers."

As to what the commission will do, Dr. C. B. Wilmer, appointed as the subcommittee of one, has made only a general comment.

"Some of our styles of dress," he says, "are improper, and some of our dances are done improperly. It seems to me no sane man can deny that. This is what the churches thought, and their idea in appointing a commission was to create a counteracting influence."

It is not for them to lay down rules. They simply want to set up a feeling of opposition to any styles in dress that are improper and to any dances that are objectionable."

But while recommendations will be made by the church commission, individual churches probably will follow each its own course in discouraging unbecoming fashions in dress, speech and manner.

At the recent meeting of the Evangelical Ministers' association of Atlanta, the need of the churches speaking as a body, instead of expressing themselves through the medium of officers or the pastor, was urged.

This suggestion was made in a discussion of the attitude of the church toward locker clubs. But it was expressed as a fact true of the church's relation to any subject.

"Our opponents," explained Dr. Charles W. Daniel, pastor of the First Baptist church, "express themselves individually and in large numbers. But the churches are heard only through the pastor. It is time for the individual churches to act through their members. Present vital matters to the congregation and let them decide and speak for themselves. This gives weight to what the churches say, and leaves no doubt that it is the church and not merely the pastor who is speaking."

Toward the close of this meeting, Baptist, Presbyterian, and Methodist ministers were interviewed concerning the church commission and their opinion of the changes that are needed in fashions. But it proved to be true that the existence of the commission had stirred up the churches to action.

Nevertheless, there is no doubting the fact that dress is creating a hubbub the country over. Legislation has been proposed in several states, and many have been the resolutions passed to make the new-fashioned woman's attire accord with the old-fashioned man's views.

The crusade is begun by men. And yet, says Marian Cox, in a widely-discussed defense of women's fashion, "woman dresses to please man. And as she is not yet developed sufficiently in her aesthetic sense to know how to achieve this end, her dress and her costume are dictated by the man."

Man has but one great inspiration in dressing herself, viz., to attract the attention of the man. And as she is not yet developed sufficiently in her aesthetic sense to know how to achieve this end, her dress and her costume are dictated by the man."

Rimac. The main part of the city is over the river, and there we can see the palace of the exposition, which contains the museum, the government palace near the cathedral, the great university, the oldest in the new world, and the vast numbers of low yellow houses which are the stores and the homes.

But let us go down from the mountains, and make our way over the Rimac and wander about through the streets. There is no city in Europe that compares with Lima in quaintness, and but few in historic interest. The streets are narrow, and they cross one another at right angles. There are many great plazas or squares which have fountains and gardens; and, extending out from these, run narrow thoroughfares walled with low buildings.

The buildings are all close to the street, and the ground floor windows are covered with great iron bars. Where there is a balcony of two or three stories, there are balconies that extend out above the street, and some of these are so wonderfully carved that they rival the work of the harem quarters of Cairo, or those of old Spain. In the business parts of the city, the houses are built up the stores and stretching from one end of the street to the other are the houses of the harem. These houses have to have peculiar architecture. The main business streets are not more than thirty feet wide, and the houses are not more than a single street car line is close to the sidewalk, and one must be careful not to get in the way of the traffic in the streets.

The stores are far different from ours. Only the newest of them have plate glass windows, and there are no fancy fronts with gorgeous window displays, which may be looked at Sundays and evenings. The most of the stores have no windows at all. They are shut off from the street by great doors that are taken away during business hours. The shops are separated by thin walls, and going along them is like walking through a museum or an oriental bazaar. The sidewalks are narrow and the goods are displayed close to the streets. Many of the dry goods stores hang fancy patterns of cloth from the ceiling, and the larger establishments will have piles of goods put on the floors and stacked up near the street. Notions of all kinds are hung from strings stretched across from wall to wall high up, and all sorts of queer ways of display are contrived. The light of the stores comes in through the doors or from the roofs. Many of the business establishments are large, with stocks of fine goods. The prices are high. The best from all over the world is brought here for sale, and the city, while not a rich one, has thousands of well-to-do people.

The chief shopping hours are from 4 to 6 o'clock in the afternoon. At that time the streets are crowded with women and men, and the crowd is as thick as that between the beauty and the patent office. F street in Washington at about the same time. Moreover, it looks much the same. No one is in a hurry. The women are dressed in the same style with their friends. Nearly every one is well dressed, and nearly every one is well dressed. The women in The Limon are very polite. The men bow and lift their hats when they meet and when they see their hats. And again as they pass by are many more well dressed women, wearing the fashionable outlandish styles of the day. They are all out on the who are clad in the dead black that the lady of Lima of the past always wore. They are all out on the. Such women do not wear bonnets, but they wrap their shawls of black about their heads and pull them back so that the face alone shows. This background adds to their beauty, and the costume is far better than the one worn by the women of now here. It saves the buying of new hats and bonnets and it is easy

And this brings me to the crowd which one sees here on Sunday. Lima is a godly city, although we have a Methodist bishop here in my hotel who says it is the most bigoted on earth. It is altogether Catholic, and that not of the modern Catholicism of America and Europe, but somewhat the same as it was in the days of Pizarro. There are prelates everywhere, and often the streets are filled with families on their way to the masses which are celebrated at the cathedral and churches. Every one is dressed for the occasion and almost all of the women are clad in black. None of them wear hats, but either bonnet and no necker or no headgear and a few wearing the headgear of showing her clothes. The average of head-dress is the cloth. Shawl covers the face only shows out. Some wear a head and not a few wear a few bonnets. I am told that women would not be permitted to enter a church in a bonnet and that those who do with a wristband and told to take their hats and go. In the churches the men sit on the women have their seats on the other side making you think of a collection of women.

I am told it is different when church is over. The people then put on their gay clothes. Some go to the bull fights and others have evening parties and dances. I would say that the costumes at church are far more seemly than those of our country where one looks over a tropical garden of flowers and birds-of-paradise feathers in a vain attempt to reach the eye of the preacher.

The Sunday sights of the streets are also more seemly. There is no business done in Lima on the Sabbath. The stores are closed and you walk between blank walls or great doors fastened with padlocks. Every store has its windows of boards, and there is not a sign of goods of any kind to be seen. Sometimes there is a grating at the top of the door for the purpose of ventilation, and sometimes a round hole has been made at the height of one's face so that those within might look out; but there is no business carried on anywhere. This is also the case in the evenings on week days. The ordinary business hours are from 9 until 6; and at night there is no walking along and looking into the store windows. Indeed, after dark the streets are almost deserted, except near the moving picture shows which have recently captured Lima by storm.

And just here I would say that there is a great liberal movement going on in this country. The people are demanding liberty of religious thought and worship. New laws have been passed by the national congress and it is now possible for any person to establish any kind of a church where he pleases. Until now the Protestants missionaries have not been permitted to push their religion into the interior, but the new laws provide for full religious freedom throughout the country.

This movement is at its beginning in Peru, but it has been going on throughout South America for several years past. Ecuador, which was once very intolerant, has established complete religious freedom. Paraguay has done the same, and Uruguay is about to adopt a new constitution in which a section shall be inserted providing that there shall be no union of the church and state. Similar demonstrations are going on in Chile, and there a general demand is expressed that from now on religious and secular institutions shall stand alone.

But before I leave the churches I must take you into the cathedral where the king and queen were crowned. Mayor with its palm trees and its beautiful fountains. It is in the heart of the city, and its towers can be seen almost anywhere over the horizon. The cathedral is a masterpiece to be the finest church edifice of the South American continent with the single exception of the cathedral of Lima. The architecture is very impressive, and it makes one respect the Catholic religion when he remembers that Catholics have been the majority in this country since that epoch. The high altar is a fine example of massive silver construction and the altarpiece and the sanctuary are extraordinary specimens of Indian carving, when Indian carving is at its best.

On the walls are fine paintings by the Spaniards. Other great masters, and the chapels are exceedingly beautiful. It was especially impressed by the cathedral took me into it, and under the altar he showed me the coffin in which Pizarro's bones lie. The coffin is of white marble with glass sides and top, so made that one could see plainly the remains lying within. The verger lighted a candle and moved it up and down the glass. As he did so I could see that all that is now left of the great Spaniard who first explored and mapped the continent of North America. It consisted of a skeleton lying upon a red velvet cushion embroidered with gold. The skeleton was of a man of middle age, and as though it were varnished. The skull lies on a pillow, the neck beneath it, the arms and legs are stretched out the ears. The jaw is a trifle drooping, the nose is prominent and the mouth is slightly open. I turned to me as I gazed down through the glass top of the casket. As I looked more closely the whole seemed to glow with a life that had been long dead. I saw the bones of the gun peel from the shins and there are little worm holes in the bones. The skin is all cracked and the joints of skin have been cut off and given to relic hunters, but as far as I am concerned the most interesting part of the body is the face. It is so intact, though decidedly leathery and the worse for wear. From the bottom of the coffin I have copied these words:

"Captain General Don Francisco Pizarro, Fundador de Lima en 18 de Enero de 1535. Muerto en 26 de Junio de 1541." As I left I gave the verger a dollar, and Carl snapped a photograph of him as he showed me the door.

Lima is a city built in a desert. Its irrigated tracts are scattered through fifteen small valleys, and they consist altogether of about 70,000 acres of cultivated fields and woodlands. They are divided into 176 estates, many of the holdings being large. Practically the whole support of the city comes from this valley, and from the trade with Peru.

The conditions about Lima are such that it never rains. There is not a waterproof nor a pair of over-shoes in the whole town, and umbrellas are used only to keep out the sun. The houses are built on stilts, and the roofs have no chimneys. All of the cooking is done over charcoal, the fumes of which get out as the wind blows. There are no backyards, and only on the outskirts are there gardens. The most of the buildings run around courts, the best of which are in the roomier face. The larger houses are built on stilts, and they cover a great deal of ground, a single one often having several rooms, courtyards, and several large courts in which play fountains amid tropical fine structures of reinforced concrete; and along the Avenue of the Exposition, for instance, are residences that would be considered first anywhere in the world. Lima has altogether now about 150,000 inhabitants. It is steadily growing, and when the canal is completed its population and business will greatly increase. It will be one of the chief tourist resorts of South America; and if it can only have some better hotels, it will be the most delightful resort along the west coast.

Many of the older buildings are beautiful and exceedingly comfortable. Some of them are largely constructed of sun-dried brick, or of plaster spread over a framework of wood, lathed with bamboo canes. The roofs are of this nature. The outer walls of such buildings are covered with stucco and the city has a very substantial appearance, whereas much of it, as I said in a former letter, is a combination of mud and fishing poles.

As it is now the hotel accommodations are limited. There are two or three large establishments which have rooms and board. You may take your accommodations on the American or European plan, and the rates are just about as high as those of the states. You will have chambermen instead of chambermaids, and your meals will consist Gin'ral Carson is to be proclaimed king or impror iv forty-four per cent iv th' county iv Antrim, impror iv thirty per cent iv th' County Down, an' protector iv th' County Donegal, or such part thereof as needs his protection. It was a gr-reat war, an' I'm glad it's over an' ord'her has been restored in Ireland. Now ye may see some fightin'."

"Ary in January th' king iv England ordered an immedjat attack on th' rebels under Gin'ral Carson. A council iv war was hurriedly called, consistin' iv Gin'ral Lord Guff, Gin'ral Lord Stuff, Gin'ral Lord Bluff, Gin'ral Lord Muff, an' Gin'ral th' Hon'able Percy Algernon Herbert Fluff. Owin' to th' unaccountable delay in th' tailorin' departmint th' uniforms were not completed until aryl in March, when intense excitement was noticed at th' war office. Cabs dashed up an' dashed away, waiters rushed in an' out, an' all th' grim signs iv th' comin' conflict could be observed. Inside th' ol' structure, when th' tea things had been cleared away, th' stratagists gathered around th' board an' laid out th' plan iv campaign. After that ivints followed in rapid succession. It was determined to reconnoiter th' inimy's position at wanst. A strong force under Gin'ral Fluff swooped down on a neighborin' news stand an', after a brief but fierce resistance, which did honor to both parties, procured copies iv all th' mornin' pa-pers. These were hurried to th' council board, where after a hasty examination iv th' racin' news th' gin'ral's gleaned fr'm spies that Gin'ral Carson's forces numbered in th' neighborhood iv fr'm wan thousand to five hundred thousand picked men, most iv thim sillicied fr'm th' ladin' stores iv Belfast but includin' a gr-reat manny who had seen achal service under Lord Londonderry, ayeher mounted or as footmen. They were well armed with rifles, monkey wrenches, pick axes, pikes, hoespikes, bricks, nutmeg graters, an' religious convictions. They were intrenched behind counters or in butlers' pantries, an' manny iv thim were in th' shipyards, where it wud be almost impossible to attack thim without takin' a polisman along. Gin'ral Carson himself occupied a house in th' suburbs, where he was heavily guarded by a few zalpous frinds an' made occasional sorties in a cab fr' lunch or dinner, but always took his breakfast at home, like th' ol' campaigner he is. It was plain at wanst that it wud be worse thim folly to attempt to attack this disprist an' well armed organi-zation. 'It is apparent to me that we have been outmanoevered,' said Gin'ral Guff. 'It wud be a military crime to sacrifice a British ar-rmy in such a rash enterprize,' said Gin'ral Bluff. 'Carson is in a disprist mood,' said Gin'ral Muff. 'Hiven knows what he might do if pressed. He has had lagal thrainin' an' he might get out an' injunction against us. I will not lead me gallant fellows against a possible concealed writ or some devilish contrivance like that. I've been in such an action before, in th' chancery courts, an' I know th' cost,' he says. So second place,' says th' gin'ral with risin' anger, 'I won't make anny further sacrifice iv blood an' treasure to put Ireland in th' hands iv people that keep Lent with so much bigotry that they'd soon destroy th' salmon fishin',' says he. 'Why didn't ye say that before?' says th' secrecy iv war. 'I had no idee that such a horrible catastrophe was starin' us in th' face,' he says. An', embracin' th' gin'ral an' pinnin' th' Victory cross on his chest, he sint him back with instructions fr' th' ar-rmy to beat a hasty retreat. An' they beat it. 'I don't blame English gin'ral's fr' not wantin' to fight thim Ulster men. If I was an Englishman, which, thank goodness, I'm not, th' last in Ireland. They are an onraisable an' slow actin' people, while we're raisable an' impetuous. 'But when sojers strike I don't know what's goin' to happen. Th' nex' thing ye know a polisman will refuse to catch a burglar because th' house he's robbin' is owned by a Republican. Thin a fireman will come down th' ladder, throw th' hose on th' ground, an' say: 'Cap, I ain't goin' to squirt out that fire. I see a pitcher iv Willum Jennings Bryan on th' wall.' An' th' cap will say: 'Ye done right, me boy. Sind th' compny back to th' inline house.' 'Anyhow, I don't blame a gin'ral fr' not wantin' to fight. With a sojer it's diff'rent, but ye'er impetuous blood is bilin' beyond endurance. if nawthin' but slaughter will satisfy ye'er ardent nature, ye'll find me soord hangin' in th' closet. Take it, me boy, an' lead ye'erself to death or victory, or both. I'll stay back here an' let ye what to do fr'm time to time. I'd say, No, ar'if Andrew Carnagey re-ally wants to have peace an' isn't on'y on a spree with his money, he'll stop hirin' orators an' thry to have th' English side took up be all th' wurruled. Lave th' makin' iv war to th' gin'ral's an' we'll have peace. No gin'ral ought to go to war unless he was ready, an' no gin'ral that knows his business ought ever to be ready. Maybe that's why we've had so few wars lately. Th' statesmen ar-re always prepared to fly somebody else at th' throat iv th' inimy iv th' country, but just as things looks fine fr' a fight th' gin'ral steps in an' whispers in th' statesman's ear: 'We are in a wretched state iv unreadiness. We have on'y three million men an' not more thim twenty thousand million rounds iv ammunition, an' we'd be bate in a week, an' he goes home an' goes to bed an' th' nex' day th' pa-pers say th' situation has been improved by mutual concessions.

"But with th' private sojer it's diff'rent. If ye left it to him there'd be nawthin' but war. Th' martial jooties iv a sojer in pipin' times iv past, as Hogan says, seems to excite him to go out an' kill some wan. A young fellow, after changin' his name so's his parents won't know he's took up th' ancient an' noble pro-fession iv arms, enlist an' goes where glory waits him. When it ketches him it ayeher puts him to wurruk at his old thrade at wan-fifth th' union scale or takes him a new an' akelly unpleasant occupation. A plumber who goes into th' army to duck th' disgraceful pro-fession at five dollars a day finds he's wipin' jints in th' barracks fr' wages, that an' make th' walkin' dillygate have him shot at sunrise. When not dhrillin' or writin' letters to th' pa-pers complainin' about th' food, he idles away his time in curryin' horses, shardin' roofs, hoein' weeds in th' colonel's garden, or wheelin' th' major's baby in th' perambulator. Some day he does somethin' that if he done it before he becomt a hero th' most he cud get wud be a ten days vacation in th' bridewell. Th' court martial takes into account all th' extenuatin' circumstances an' gives him two years at hard labor. Small blame to him if ye never hear him yellin' 'hooray' when Andrew Carnagey goes on. No, sir; if I had ever been tempted by thim colored pitchers to enlist an' th' gin'ral was to come to me an' say: 'Corporal—fr' I'd be that or nawthin'—th' government wishes ye to go out an' fight Him nussy, ye'er best frind. Can we rely on ye, fr' say, 'Hinnissy? That little, disagreeable fellow? 'Why, I've wanted to shoot that man fr' forty years.' Thim I will lead ye to victory. 'I don't care where ye lead me to. On'y lead me away fr'm here.'"

"I see in th' pa-pers that if thim gin'ral's were in Germany they'd be hang'd," said Mr. Hennessy.

"If thim gin'ral's were in Germany they wudden't be gin'ral's," said Mr. Dooley.

"Whin not dhrillin' he idles away his time in wheelin' the major's baby in the perambulator."

it was determined to sind Gin'ral Lord Guff over to see th' secrecy iv war an' discuss th' matter with him. Th' supream chief iv th' ar-rmy received him sternly an', after th' tea things had been cleared away, demanded to know why he had disobeyed orders, an' wud he give him a light? 'We have decided to discontinue this crool, unnecessary war,' says th' gin'ral gruffly, puffin' a cigaret. 'Why?' says th' secrecy iv war angrily. 'Because,' says th' gin'ral, 'in th' first place th' inimy ar-re armed,' says he. 'That is a reason that don't appeal to me at this distance,' says th' secrecy iv war haughtily. 'An' in th' inimy I'd pick out wud be thim tough fellows fr'm th' north. As foreigners I despise thim, but as fellow countrymen an' inmates I hold thim in th' highest regard. Now that th' military has retired, if th' polis will kindly step aside, we'll resoom th' argumint where it was left off whin th' English had th' presumption to interfere. Good mornin', Alexander; take that. How d'y'e do, Michael, th' same to ye with this pick ax! We understand each other perfectly. So we must fight. Nawthin' leads to trouble so quick as a perfect understandin'. Th' English don't understand us th' they always mess things up if I was a gin'ral divle a fut cud they thrive me into a war without they loaded a cannon behind me. If a statesman come to me an' said, 'Gin'ral Dooley, in order to square meself with me constituents in Kansas I must ast ye to grab th' ol' flag an' rush into a gory grave,' I'd say, 'No, thank ye kindly.' I'd say: 'I'm comfortable here. It's a good job, th' quarters are to me likin', an' I'm told be th' fair that th' unyform is becomin'.' 'I have no hard feelin's at all again anny foreign nations whatever. Th' foreigners I have met has been agreeable fellows. If ye feel badly about th' way th' government iv Pattynony is actin', if

ATLANTA'S EVERY-DAY HEROINE—BRAVERY IS PART OF THE TRAINED NURSE'S DAY'S WORK

Miss Lilly Dickson, One of Atlanta's Brave Army of Trained Nurses

By Ward Greene.

MISS DICKSON is a trained nurse in a big Atlanta hospital, one of a great army of everyday heroines whose code is "Always smile."

From the time she starts work at 7 o'clock in the morning until she stops—supposedly at 7 at night, generally much later, often at daybreak—she must smile for that is the first duty of a trained nurse.

She has a first name, but in the language she is just "L. Dickson," as to her nurse just as she would don her blue dress and her white apron and cap.

So when Miss Dickson started her day's work the other morning she put on her smile just as she would don her blue dress and her white apron and cap.

And she looked in the mirror just as anxious to see that her smile was a bright, cheery, heart-warming smile as she would see that her apron was as long as her skirt or her cap was as ready to become furious when a crumb of food was on the floor.

Miss Dickson lowered the shade a trifle while the society woman fidgeted nervously with her hands and directed her. At the tenth pull the shade was adjusted to the society woman's satisfaction.

As Miss Dickson softly closed the door, the buzzer jangled harshly. She frowned but when she entered room No. 10 she was smiling.

"What's his case washed," she said. "Oh, there you are!" greeted the voice from the bed, a man's voice, hearty and insistent. "Must have some tobacco. Can't get along without it."

"I'm sorry," smiled Miss Dickson. "But doctors' orders, you know. Perhaps you'd better try some of the other men's." She found the doctors had left instructions for that, changing bottles for changing hours. She found the nurse in the diet kitchen of one change entered but a little while ago.

Then she looked each of the ten rooms, for those who had spent the night in restless slumber and greeted her smile for those who had lain on recovery. She found the nurse in the diet kitchen of one change entered but a little while ago.

These she must get from the little closet in the hall, must get that each was as each doctor said it should be and each was given properly.

Voice of the Buzzer. More baths, more turnings in bed, more smiles—and one day's work was fairly under way. It was about time for the buzzer.

The buzzer has a voice all its own. It is a nagging, peevish tone that means someone on the other end, pressing it pettily, is uncomfortable or tired or restless or angry.

It rings in the hall and may come from any of the nine rooms. Any nurse that is in the hall is supposed to answer it. To Miss Dickson, as to every other nurse in the hospital, it seemed that the buzzer was forever ringing just as she was passing by.

On this morning the buzzer rang first from No. 4. Miss Dickson answered it, with a smile. She knew the door was open the door what the matter was.

No. 6 was an appendix. A society woman, as haughty as a society woman can be, as pampered and spoiled, as ready to become furious when a crumb of food was on the floor.

"Mercy, where have you been?" shrieked the society woman, as Miss Dickson entered the room. "You've been an angel! The way you nurse—loaf—why, it's terrible!"

"What did you want, ma'am?" said Miss Dickson, and she smiled. "Why the light," said the society woman. "It hurts my eyes. One of you nurses left the shade up too high. It might injure me irretrievably. I'm so delicate, you know," and she sighed in self-pity.

Miss Dickson lowered the shade a trifle while the society woman fidgeted nervously with her hands and directed her. At the tenth pull the shade was adjusted to the society woman's satisfaction.

As Miss Dickson softly closed the door, the buzzer jangled harshly. She frowned but when she entered room No. 10 she was smiling.

"What's his case washed," she said. "Oh, there you are!" greeted the voice from the bed, a man's voice, hearty and insistent. "Must have some tobacco. Can't get along without it."

He was a young man and while Miss Dickson stood beside him and counted the slow, drumming flutters in his wrist, she looked at his pinched, white face and the brown curls matted with sweat on his forehead and she ceased to smile.

Will She Come Today? But pretty soon the pneumonia patient's eyelids flickered a trifle and they opened big and blue. Miss Dickson leaned over and smiled.

"What day is it?" whispered the pneumonia patient. "Tuesday," said Miss Dickson. "Do you think she will come today?" said the pneumonia patient. "Yes," said Miss Dickson. "What day is it?" whispered the pneumonia patient. "Tuesday," said Miss Dickson.

"Do you think she will come today?" said the pneumonia patient. "Yes," said Miss Dickson. "What day is it?" whispered the pneumonia patient. "Tuesday," said Miss Dickson.

"Do you think she will come today?" said the pneumonia patient. "Yes," said Miss Dickson. "What day is it?" whispered the pneumonia patient. "Tuesday," said Miss Dickson.

The patient was operated on at once. While the doctors and the surgical nurses were preparing the operating room upstairs, Miss Dickson prepared the patient in No. 7.

The first thing she did was to shave No. 7's head behind the ear. You may not know it, but trained nurses, it seems, are some of the best barbers we have. So with a plain razor Miss Dickson shaved the hair away from No. 7's head, and swathed her in the "leggin's" that each patient wears who is operated on.

Then she put her on the "trundle-bed" and she was taken away to the operating room. While waiting until No. 7 should be brought down again Miss Dickson reviewed her acquaintance with the buzzer and the scrub room.

Miss Dickson was very tired, but she still remembered that a trained nurse can never sit down. She snatched a few minutes' rest at the chart, where she seated herself while she filled out the card of the patient who had just arrived.

Wouldn't Take Off Wedding Ring. "Date, hour of admission, name, age, occupation, married, single, room, name, address, name and address of nearest relative to whom possible shall be sent in case of serious illness, patient's residence, doctor."

Then she smiled to herself. She remembered how No. 7 had bridled indignantly when she had asked her if she was married. It was funny how indignant some of these patients become at the question.

And No. 7 had objected seriously when Miss Dickson had asked her to remove her ring, a plain, gold band. For that is part of the duty of the trained nurse. But No. 7 had absolutely refused.

Miss Dickson had explained that some of the medicines used in the operating room might dull the gold or eat it away, but the woman had de- clared she would take the responsibility.

When No. 7 was brought back to her room Miss Dickson waited for the reaction. Patients came out from the operating room in different ways. Some quietly with a smile, some frightened, some fighting mad, all confused. But Miss Dickson hoped it would be the first.

An hour later she left to take her two hours off. The smile all gone, the memory of how the frightened woman had clung to her and begged her not to leave, still in her heart.

When she had left, No. 7 it had been necessary to take all the temperatures again, feed one patient who was too weak to sit up, fill the chart book to date, give more baths, more alcohol rubs.

"Homes" Bacteriology. Then she was free—two hours. She had time to spend her off-time in a walk, for she was very tired. She closed the green walls and smelled medicines of the hospital, and the wind from over the hills danced an invigorating breeze, the long, still street, shining cool beneath the green trees.

But there was the lecture. Trained nurses are students during their entire three years, and she had remembered that the doctor who le-ttured on bacteriology would make his weekly visit to the dormitory that night. He always asked questions and delighted in his ability to catch anyone napping.

So for two hours she stayed in her room and "bored" the thrilling subject of bacteriology. When she closed her book with a sigh, it was supper time. The lecture and then an hour of play before she must turn in at 10 o'clock. Trained nurses have two nights off a week, one state night, until 11 o'clock, a month.

It was a most uninteresting lecture she listened to that night and when she was asked a question it was the very one she didn't know. She was thoroughly tired out and smiling when 8 o'clock came and she started for her room.

"Miss Dickson!" came a voice. "Oh, Miss Dickson!" she turned. It was the head nurse. "An emergency case has just come in and I haven't anybody to spare. I'll have to put you on special tonight."

Miss Dickson smiled, wearily, patiently. "Oh, all right."

The emergency call was a man rent through the breast in a street brawl. She prepared him for the operation, while he moaned and whimpered, half conscious.

It was late, nearly 11 o'clock, by the time he was brought down from the operating room to No. 5. Watch him carefully when he reacts, the doctor told her, he may break the stitches in the wound.

The Delirious Patient. In the little room she sat beside the inert form on the bed. The electric light glared brightly overhead, the air outside lay dark and hot. She could hear the hum of the city far off, the lonely whistle of a freight train.

There in the silence she waited minute after minute, too tired to rest, but at last, "special" able to sit down. A long, fluttering sigh came from the bed and a man's hand picked nervously at the coverlet. He was coming out from the ether.

Miss Dickson bent over No. 5 as his bloodshot eyes opened wildly and gazed at her like an animal's at bay, the blood-hunt of delirium in them.

"You turned me up, you damn traitor!" No. 5 hissed at her. "I'll fix you! I'll fix you!" One great hand swept like a flail through the air while Miss Dickson pressed the other down against the coverlet and smoothed his forehead back.

No. 5 suddenly shrank against the pillows. He gazed horrified at the green wall opposite and whimpered pitifully.

"Do you see it?" he whispered. "There!—It crawls, it's making faces at me—keep it off! keep it off!"

His voice rose to a shriek and he trembled like a tree shaken in the wind. "Don't let it get me, touch me! Don't let it, I tell you! Save me for God's sake! Save me!"

Miss Dickson was forcing him down into the pillows, speaking in soothing tones, smoothing his head back, holding his hands in a firm grip. No. 5 changed and began to sing, laughing insanely and trying to rock back and forth.

"Oh, it's always fair wea-ther!" he shouted at the top of his voice and then went off into a fit of coughing that left him weak and gasping. Miss Dickson feared a hemorrhage, but No. 5 sank back on his pillow with a long sigh.

By and by he turned his eyes toward her and spoke thickly. "Where am I?" he asked. "You've been shot, you're in the hospital," Miss Dickson smiled back at him. "Don't worry. Just go to sleep and you'll be all right."

For a full minute No. 5 gazed at her in doubt, then he turned his face to the wall and lay silent. Miss Dickson sat, not daring to move. Pretty soon No. 5's breath lengthened into regular respiration, long and deep. He began to snore.

Miss Dickson leaned back with a sigh. A breeze lifted the window curtains and touched her hot cheeks. Outside the darkness thickened and the hum of the city grew distant and dim.

A street car clanged by, shattering the silence for a moment and waking Miss Dickson violently from the dose she had dropped into.

She sat up and winked her eyes rapidly and then sat quietly peering with wide eyes into the night. Far off down the street a whistle sounded. "Come back to Erin, Mavourneen, Mavourneen," until it trailed away to silence once more.

And so she sat there, battling against sleep and weariness, with her eyes jerking between the darkness and the form on the bed, until at last the dawn shivered white and cold outside and the day's work was over.

of the people in the mountain district they called him Otokio Yama. Otokio means "man" and Yama means "mountain."

Not long ago Major Wigmore, former American Attaché at Tokio, and C. J. Arnel, Japanese secretary of the embassy, accompanied Otokio Yama on a bear hunt in the Hokkaido mountains.

"How old are you?" asked Major Wigmore by means of an interpreter. Whereupon the old hunter commenced to repeat "herring, salmon, herring, salmon, herring," until he was puzzled. He interpreted, laughed.

"He is counting up his years," he said. "and the way he does it is to count the seasons. To him there are two seasons, when the herring come and when the salmon come. One herring season and one salmon season and he names every man as best they could."

High up in the mountains they came across a man who seemed to be dead among the people in that vicinity. He was a great hunter and much admired by the natives because of his prowess. When the Japanese officials learned that he had killed many bears with no hands and half wild people had no small bow and arrow they could scarcely believe it, but he took them into the forest with him and soon proved it by killing a bear with a poisoned arrow sent with accurate aim to the brute's body just below the fifth rib.

Because this man seemed to be dead

King Edward's Chef
LONDON, April 6.—Mr. J. M. Juste, Alphonse Manager, King Edward VII's chef, has just died in Twyford-avenue, Acton, at the age of sixty-eight.

He became the royal chef about twenty years ago and was head of the Buckingham Palace kitchens throughout the reign of Queen Victoria.

WELL," said Raffles, "what do you make of it?"

"I read the advertisement in the last column of the Daily Telegraph, and it ran:

TWO THOUSAND POUNDS

REWARD.

The above sum may be earned by anyone qualified to undertake delivery of a million and prepared to run certain risk. Apply by telegram.

Security, London, said I, "it's the most extraordinary advertisement that ever got into the paper."

Raffles smiled.

"Not quite all that, Bunsy," said extraordinary enough, "gratuitous."

"Look at the figure!"

"It is certainly large."

"And the mission—and the risk!"

"Yes, the combination is frank, to say the least of it. But the original point is requiring applications by telegram to a telegraphic address."

"Fellow who thought of that, and something in his game," with one word he choked off the million, who up to a blind, and stood simply pointing to an empty picture frame."

"I was a long time before I could get a word out of him. Then at last he told me that that frame had contained one of the rarest and most valuable pictures in England—in the world—an original Vermeer."

"That day at the National Gallery that the picture is practically priceless. And young Debenham has said it for five thousand pounds!"

"The dealer he has," said Raffles.

"I inquired who had bought it."

"A Queenslander, the Hon. John Montagu Craggs, M. L. C., to give him his full title, who is expected to be anything about him on Tuesday last; we didn't even know for certain that young Debenham had stolen it."

"But he had gone down for money on the Monday evening, had been refused, and then he had turned up with the picture."

"In this way, he had threatened revenge, and that was it. I advised him to hunt him up in town on the Tuesday night he confessed as much in the most honest manner imaginable. But he wouldn't tell me who was the purchaser, and finding out took the rest of the week; but I did find out, and a nice time I've had of it ever since."

Backward and forward between Debenham and the Metropole, where the Queenslander is staying, sometimes twice a day; threats, offers, prayers, entreaties, but not one of them a bit good."

"But," said Raffles, "surely it is a case to go to Debenham; he can pay him back his money and force him to give the picture up."

"Exactly; but not without an action and a public scandal, and that my client declines to face. I've got to get it back by fair means or foul. He gives me carte blanche in the matter, and I've been obliged to throw in a blank check if asked."

"Well, I've offered you to produce it, but Craggs simply tore it in two; the one old boy is as much a character as the other, and black even two of them I'm at my wit's end."

"And you wish us to steal this picture?"

"I was magnificently said; the lawyer flushed from his hair to his collar."

"I knew you were not the men!" he growled. "I never thought of men of your stamp! But it's not stealing, it's recovery."

"It's recovering stolen property," said Raffles. "You're not a thief, are you?"

"No, no—it's an enterprise, an enterprise of the highest order, if you like, but not stealing."

"You yourself mentioned the picture," said Raffles.

"And the risk," I added.

"We pay for that," he said once more.

"But not enough," said Raffles, shaking his head. "My good sir, I've been offered what I call a double your stakes, and I for one am your man."

Debenham waved.

"Do you think you could bring it off?"

"We could try."

"And you would really run the risk for four thousand pounds?"

Raffles looked at me, I nodded.

"We would," said he, "and blow the odds!"

"The fact is, I find myself in a difficult position," he confessed at last. "I am the first really honest man I have met who can afford to send long telegrams."

"Don't send them," said Raffles. "I don't want to hear of your sending long telegrams. I am not sure that you are not a bit of a fool. I rather intended to appeal to the—er—adventurous."

"The black eye gleamed shrewdly."

"I am not a professional robber, that's what you mean," said Raffles, smiling. "But we would be a good one."

"Anything," I murmured.

"The solicitor rapped his desk."

"I'll tell you what I want you to do. You can't refuse to do it. It's illegal in a good cause, that's the risk, and my client is prepared to stand by it. He will pay for the attempt, in case of failure; the money is as good as yours, and you can't refuse. My client is Sir Bernard Debenham, of Broom Hall, Essex."

"I know his son," I remarked.

Raffles knew him too, but said nothing. And his eyes were fixed on me in my direction. Bennett Addenbrooke turned to me.

"Then," said he, "you have the privilege of knowing one of the most complete blackguards about town."

Of course, if you wish, you must come down with me and hear what I say; but I really don't see what point in it."

And as usual Raffles had his way. Though Bennett Addenbrooke showed some temper when he was gone, and I myself shared his annoyance to no small extent.

That day I saw no more of Raffles, but a telegram reached me when I was dressing for dinner: "I'm in your room tomorrow from noon and keep rest of day."

"On Tuesday last week I had a telegram from Sir Bernard; I was to go to him at once. I found him waiting for me in the drive; without a word he led me to the picture gallery, which was locked and darkened, drew up a blind, and stood simply pointing to an empty picture frame."

"I was a long time before I could get a word out of him. Then at last he told me that that frame had contained one of the rarest and most valuable pictures in England—in the world—an original Vermeer."

But he wouldn't tell me who was the purchaser, and finding out took the rest of the week; but I did find out, and a nice time I've had of it ever since."

Backward and forward between Debenham and the Metropole, where the Queenslander is staying, sometimes twice a day; threats, offers, prayers, entreaties, but not one of them a bit good."

"But," said Raffles, "surely it is a case to go to Debenham; he can pay him back his money and force him to give the picture up."

"Exactly; but not without an action and a public scandal, and that my client declines to face. I've got to get it back by fair means or foul. He gives me carte blanche in the matter, and I've been obliged to throw in a blank check if asked."

"Well, I've offered you to produce it, but Craggs simply tore it in two; the one old boy is as much a character as the other, and black even two of them I'm at my wit's end."

"And you wish us to steal this picture?"

"I was magnificently said; the lawyer flushed from his hair to his collar."

"I knew you were not the men!" he growled. "I never thought of men of your stamp! But it's not stealing, it's recovery."

"It's recovering stolen property," said Raffles. "You're not a thief, are you?"

"No, no—it's an enterprise, an enterprise of the highest order, if you like, but not stealing."

"You yourself mentioned the picture," said Raffles.

"And the risk," I added.

"We pay for that," he said once more.

"But not enough," said Raffles, shaking his head. "My good sir, I've been offered what I call a double your stakes, and I for one am your man."

Debenham waved.

"Do you think you could bring it off?"

"We could try."

"And you would really run the risk for four thousand pounds?"

Raffles looked at me, I nodded.

"We would," said he, "and blow the odds!"

"The fact is, I find myself in a difficult position," he confessed at last. "I am the first really honest man I have met who can afford to send long telegrams."

"Don't send them," said Raffles. "I don't want to hear of your sending long telegrams. I am not sure that you are not a bit of a fool. I rather intended to appeal to the—er—adventurous."

"The black eye gleamed shrewdly."

"I am not a professional robber, that's what you mean," said Raffles, smiling. "But we would be a good one."

"Anything," I murmured.

"The solicitor rapped his desk."

"I'll tell you what I want you to do. You can't refuse to do it. It's illegal in a good cause, that's the risk, and my client is prepared to stand by it. He will pay for the attempt, in case of failure; the money is as good as yours, and you can't refuse. My client is Sir Bernard Debenham, of Broom Hall, Essex."

"I know his son," I remarked.

Raffles knew him too, but said nothing. And his eyes were fixed on me in my direction. Bennett Addenbrooke turned to me.

"Then," said he, "you have the privilege of knowing one of the most complete blackguards about town."

Heaven knows what I contrived to say at last. Struck speechless first by my relief, I continued silent from a very different cause. A new angle of emotions did my tongue. Raffles had failed—Raffles had failed! Could not I have said: "Was it too late? Was there no way?"

The flutter I was in as he closed the case!

"For the last time," he went on, as his keys jingled back into his pockets. "I go straight into the strongroom on board."

For the last time! If I could but send him to Australia with his legitimate contents in his precious nap case! If I could but succeed where Raffles had failed!

SEGADLOS

THE HOME OF DANCING IN ATLANTA

ONCE upon a time there came to Atlanta a foreigner named Segadlos. He was a master of the dance and loved his art. And he wanted to teach Atlanta, and her people the true beauty of dancing.

But he found, like many another foreigner of a new idea, that Atlanta was not ready to be taught. For a time while Segadlos struggled along as he might, with few patrons and fewer pupils.

He called the interest of some so-called folk, among them Mrs. Lena Huntley. It was Mrs. Huntley who had built for Segadlos a little frame structure for a dancing studio in Peach street between the two Peach-

Here for day after day Segadlos strove to teach the waltz and the two-step and first steps in aesthetic dancing to young Atlanta. But it was a hard struggle, a losing fight, and so one day the little professor quietly gave up the battle and died, just on the eve of success.

Only after Segadlos was gone did Atlanta realize his true worth. Sorrow for his death was deep among his patrons, and one of these, Mrs. Huntley, decided that the most fitting memorial would be a bigger, better Segadlos studio on the site of the old one. And so Segadlos was built, the dancing studio which today is the most universally known and loved place of amusement south of Mason and Dixon's line.

Located in the heart of the residence section, this unique little hall has been the trying place for season after season of young folk. The name of Segadlos is familiar not only in Atlanta but in every college town in the south and throughout the year it vibrates with genuine happiness and the joy of youth.

The Long Mirror.

Since it was first founded about ten years ago, its popularity waxed and waned. For a while, toward the first, Segadlos lost some of its distinction, but with the coming of Miss Lillian Viola Moseley to Atlanta six years ago, it regained its old prestige and today is the non plus ultra of dance studios in Atlanta and Dixie.

If the long mirror set in the north wall of Segadlos could send forth again across the polished floors the faces and forms it has reflected in the years it has stood there, there would flit a long procession, the beauty and gallantry of Atlanta society for the past decade.

The waltz and the two-step, classic dancing, the Boston, a brief spasm of the turkey-trot, the tango, the maxixe, the one-step—all would flit into the present.

What belles and beaux of yesterday would laugh out at you from the long mirror. There would be college sets that merged into debutante sets and young married sets. There would be fraternity dances, football dances, baseball and holiday dances, boys and girls who have grown into young men and women, children who have passed into girl and boyhood—all of whom have danced across Segadlos' floor and smiled into the long mirror as they swept past.

Weekly Dances.

Many of the dancers of these vanished days still frequent Segadlos, most of them in fact, for the weekly program arranged for the studio by Miss Moseley includes enjoyable classes and dances for Atlanta society, whether young or old.

Of course the college set considers Segadlos its special property. The dances there after Tech's football and baseball games have become an institution and much of the bitterness and rivalry that characterized the gridiron when the Red and Black met the Gold and White has died away in the face of the good fellowship that reigns at Segadlos.

During the college year Segadlos is taxed often to its utmost capacity with the leading beauty and representative young manhood of the principal southern cities. A fraternity dance is not a real fraternity dance unless it is held at Segadlos; the weekly college dances are as much a part of Tech's curriculum as the class room and the campus.

Once a week the debutante set and their friends come to Segadlos and visiting young ladies are always entertained at these affairs and number them among the most enjoyable events of their visits to Atlanta.

Once a week the married contingent also assembles at Segadlos at a mid-week informal dance, as a relaxation from the more formal functions at the clubs. Then the real pleasure experienced on these occasions is expressed by the happy smiles on the faces of those present and the spirited graceful execution by the dancers of the newest and most difficult steps.

Childhood's Classes.

Perhaps no feature of Segadlos is more worthy of comment than Miss Moseley's classes for children. One visit to them will convince you of the marvelous grace of the new dances and the ability of Miss Moseley's young pupils to perform them.

She herself declares that she would not mind exhibiting them before the greatest dancing masters of America. The grace and ease that characterize the performing of the one-step, the hesitation and the tango by some of Miss Moseley's children is enough to bring envy to an older and more experienced dancer.

Aesthetic dancing is taught to classes of Atlanta children by Miss Moseley. Not only does this result in a grace of carriage and a distinctive poise, but they are endowed with a love of true beauty that can be gained in no other way.

These young people are in love with their work, in love with their teacher. For under Miss Moseley's leadership a spirit of harmony and pleasure is apparent in each class and every dance. She has won a firm place in the affections of her pupils and her friends, and the greater part of Segadlos' popularity is due to her unflagging endeavors to place its dances on a high plane.

The true secret of Miss Moseley's and Segadlos' success is the true merit of her work. She is not just a dancing teacher. She is an artist. She has a passionate love for her profession and is conceded to be the leading authority on dancing in the south.

Miss Moseley studies each summer with Louis N. Chailoff, of New York city, formerly of the Imperial ballet of Russia and recognized head of the dancing profession in America. Under his instruction, Miss Moseley studies classical, aesthetic, interpretative, symbolical, characteristic and imitative dancing.

She has also studied pantomime and ballet dancing under Romeo, former ballet master at the New York Hippodrome. Her annual trips to New York enable her to bring home the latest and most fashionable steps for her pupils. This year she is contemplating a trip to Europe, where she will study under the leading dancing masters of the continent, with a few weeks of instruction in New York city to thoroughly Americanize what she has learned.

Grand Opera for Federal Prisoners

Caruso, Farrar and Other Members of the Metropolitan Company May Sing This Month at the Government Penitentiary.

By Angus Perskerson.

THE foreman pushed back his hat and smiled in the Scotch fashion by drawing down the left hand corner of his mouth and elevating his right eyebrow.

In the middle of the stone shed a fat Italian stood on a platform hammering at a chunk of stone as big as a boxcar. The windows in the shed threw out the light in such a way as to "etch" his figure.

He seemed seven feet tall and a yard broad, and when he swung his hammer aloft and poised it there he was statueque as well as tremendous.

"Come up a little closer," urged the foreman.

The mason swung his hammer upward, then downward, and broke off a corner of stone the size of a Belgian block.

"La, la, la," he hummed as he brushed away the dust of the stone with his hand, and set his chisel in a new place.

Up went the hammer, paused a moment while the mason finished a bar from "Il Trovatore," and whacked against the top of the chisel.

The best next to "Bull." "Next to Bull," he's the best baseball player we got," complained the foreman, "but all he can do now is whitethe untuneful music and count the days. Bull's our no-hit man, and he didn't lose but two games last year. They'd dug up a new counterfeiting charge against him then, and it hurt his control."

"The bunch of Italians at that end of the shed hummed softly under their breath, and a faint melody in which Verdi predominated, pushed itself above the rattle of the hammers."

"What do you think they're going to sing?" asked the foreman. "Maybe 'Annie Laurie,'" he pleaded. "Well, they ought."

"You know," said Warden Moyer, at the front door of the federal prison, "grand opera week means about three times as much on the inside of this penitentiary as it does on the outside. And this year it may mean more than ever."

Perhaps Caruso, Miss Farrar and three or four other members of the company will visit the penitentiary and sing there.

If you'll remember, the Italian prisoners sent a message to Caruso last year by a guard named Fajella, who could speak to the singer in his own tongue.

In the Name of Brotherhood. "In the name of brotherhood," they asked, "won't you come and sing to us?"

And because of this message from his unfortunate countrymen, he visited the prison, and, in the little chapel where men charged with many crimes sat in rows, he sang with finer emotion than at any opera given here.

He began with an aria from "L'Africana," then he sang a ballad by Tosti, and ended with his sob song from "Pagliacci."

Just before he reached the prison the men filled in one by one and silently took their places in the chairs which are arranged like seats in a theater.

The leader of the group that turned to the left and took their seats in the left hand section was an Indian, ponderous, flabby, his face broad and good humored, who'd killed half a dozen men in Indian Territory. Near him was Bram, the sailor, about whom Mary Roberts Rinehart, the novelist, has written a book to prove his innocence. Next came a man to whom Harper's once paid $10,000 for a novel. Then trooped the counterfeiter, and the lank, rugged old moonshiners.

Everybody sat down and waited. The visitors began to arrive. The orchestra came in. The visitors craned their heads to see Caruso who was entering, but the prisoners sat stolidly in their seats, as though they had trained themselves against curiosity.

The orchestra began to play popular music, and you could see smiles break over the faces of the men in gray uniforms.

When Caruso Sang. Caruso sang his first two songs, and the Italians who sat together toward the front, made themselves distinct by leaning forward with their chins in their hands.

Then, he sang the last of his three arias, the song from "Pagliacci." As the orchestra began to play he came nearer to the edge of the platform. One prisoner in the group of Italians half rose, then sat down again. The visitors stopped their low chatter. The moment was intense. And the time that he sang seemed hardly more than an instant; yet, it was also very long. Everyone roused himself from a few minutes of complete absorption. The Italians seemed to forget rules for they rose and one or two called to the singer.

The applause was first a ripple; for prisoners are slow to clap their hands. It seems that they get used to silence. Then, the hand claps rose in a storm. The singer returned from the wings bowing, throwing out his hands to his audience, exclaiming to them.

The guards gave the word, and the prisoners began to leave the hall. The group of Italians went last. They were filing through the door when one cried Caruso's name, the applause broke out again, and the singer hurrying back to the stage, waved to them until the last man had passed through the door way and the hall was empty except for the people who had come to look on.

Bori Leads Her Smelling Salts. In the wings, Seguro and Scotti exclaimed that Caruso had surpassed himself, and Bori lent him her smelling salts.

Had it not been for a misunderstanding they would have joined in the concert. Someone said Caruso wouldn't sing if anybody else did. And, while his visit to the prison was in a spirit of humanity that had nothing to do with pithiness, the prisoners had left the hall before the misunderstanding cleared away. Then, all the singers hurried to the warden and said that when they saw Atlanta next, they would visit the prison and sing.

Bori will not be with the company this year; Farrar is singing the principal roles. Perhaps, she and Caruso and Scotti and Seguro and others besides will go to the prison. Perhaps, instead of a concert, it will be the cream of the Metropolitan's repertoire, grand opera that the prisoners will hear. Everyone hopes so. The warden pointed to a picture of Miss Farrar hanging on the wall of his office in a frame larger than President Wilson's. "Of course our population's changed a lot since she sang here," he granted. "But there are a good many who remember when she sang in the chapel. Her singing was something a lot of us won't ever forget. But you might go through and get your own impressions."

The first visit was to the chapel. It is a quiet, tranquil room with the light sufficient to render it cheerful, and subdued enough to make it restful.

The Book Reader. Near the entrance are two rooms in which prisoners were mending old leather bound books. All the books seemed old and to have leather bindings.

A prisoner began to play the "Fifth Nocturne" on the time-worn piano in the chapel. The voice of the piano has grown weaker with age, but its tone seems to have become sweeter. The man played in a dreamy way, pausing over passages that pleased him, repeating them, going back to them.

He picked up his music, slid off the piano stool and started toward one of the bookbinding rooms. It seemed a good chance for the first impression.

"What?" he said, turning round quickly. "Opera? Do we? Well," he paused a minute. "I'd rather hear Caruso; over than get out a month sooner."

First a visit to the kitchen, then the tailor's shop, and the stone shed was reached.

"We got our picture in Beach's guide," said the foreman, "come on and look at it. You know, our regular season opened last week, and we're playing every Saturday now. Look at the shop from here."

In two rows down the length of the shed the prisoners bent to the task of hammering Stone Mountain granite into shape for the new front of the prison. Above them towered the fat Italian. He was pausing with the hammer raised above his head.

Camp of the Sick Men. Any moving picture company with such a subject would have dramatized two books of the Apocrypha to work in its mighty figure.

"Grand opera," said the foreman. "Sure. But Caruso ought to sing 'Comin' Thro the Rye.' Bull," he asked, "what was the score in that Giants and Tigers game yesterday?"

The trip of inspection turned to the camp of the sick men. Tents have been pitched for the tubercular patients in the lee of the concrete wall that encircles the prison. The camp is a row of tents surrounded by a wire fence; the sun shines on it, two apple trees, covered with white blossoms stand at each end of the row of tents, and before the canvas houses are planted plots of flowers.

No one works. Prisoners tend the flowers and play dominoes under the blossoming trees. One of the three players was an old man. He laid down the counter he had held in his hand, while he studied the board, and leaned back.

"Opera," he said. "Yes, we all want it. But I wish they'd sing a hymn," he picked up the counter and made his move.

Write Your Own Price Ticket

BY HERBERT KAUFMAN. There is always another way to do it. A dogged brain will eventually gnaw its way through any obstacle.

Hindrances do not thwart determination but inspire it.

Almost everything that men use or do was considered undesirable or impossible to all men in some century. Tomorrow's progress largely lies amid yesterday's failures. The greatest hope of the new comes to be found on the field where his inefficient predecessors surrendered to hardship.

Opportunity is not a flower, but a thorn-patch. None but the hardy, unquailing and persistent can expect to surmount the adverse chance against the majority.

Success is a race. Free are to suggest gold in a race.

Today the dividing line between the few who have and the many who have little is marked by merit.

And ambition finds its keenest stimulus in the contemplation of an unproductive list of names, rendered noteworthy by the unflinching and unselfish purpose through which humble-born thousands have attained rank and distinction.

You can't take a better man's place until you are ready to accept place and abide by the conditions, the discipline, the disappointments, the humiliations of the path.

In this year of our Lord 1914, anybody can write his own price ticket and only a better man than himself can alter the figure.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

SNOWY ascension lilies, typifying in their grace and beauty the resurrection morn, have been seen during the past few days in the North windows, adding exquisite flowers in welcome to the morning glories, commemorating the coming Easter day. In the hospital wards and corridors are aliborn with beautiful blossoms, their fragrant greetings representing to the sufferers within the visible incarnation of a loving and kindly thought from the great joyous resurrection without. In the homes baskets of vari-colored flowers have brought their message to matron and maid, debatable and younger sister, and have awakened in many a wonder as to the origin of the beautiful and word Easter, which long ago was applied by the Anglo-Saxons to the greatest feast of the ecclesiastical year. The word and its derivation are shrouded in mists of antiquity, but its meaning is thought to be identical with the rising light of day and spring, and as far back as the time of the venerable Bede, April was called the Easter month.

AN announcement of today that will occasion widespread interest is that of the engagement and approaching marriage of Miss Frances Josephine Stewart and Dr. Hugh Inman Battey. Miss Stewart is one of five lovely sisters who are unusually accomplished, and is herself an honor graduate of Vassar college. Her education has been broadened by extensive travel on the European continent, and several years of study in music have made her a finished pianist. Dr. Battey, who is named for his uncle, the late Mr. Hugh Inman, is the second son of Mr. and Mrs. George Magruder Battey and a grandson of the late Dr. Robert Battey, from whom he has inherited a splendid ability in surgery, which has gained for him instant recognition in his chosen profession. Dr. Battey and his bride will go abroad on their wedding trip, arriving in London in July to attend the Clinical Congress of Surgeons of North America, after which they will remain traveling on the continent for several weeks. The wedding will take place at the residence of the bride's mother on West Peachtree street.

JACOBS' MALT EXTRACT

The medicinal qualities of malt extract are thoroughly recognized by physicians and the public generally, and Jacobs' Malt Extract is known by thousands of people as representing the very highest quality.

Jacobs' Malt Extract is prepared from the very finest barley malt, properly combined with other valuable ingredients. It contains all the nutritive and medicinal features of the malt.

It is primarily a liquid food and digestive agent, and as such is highly recommended. It promotes digestion, strengthens the nerves and increases the appetite.

Jacobs' Malt Extract is sold as a tonic, not as a beverage, and for this reason is not to be confused with the many stimulating extracts of malt that possess absolutely no medicinal or otherwise beneficial properties.

MISS ETTA STUART WHITAKER.

Miss Whitaker's wedding to Mr. Carl Haner, of New York, will be celebrated Monday evening, at All Saints' Episcopal church, when the full vested choir will lead the bridal procession and sing appropriate nuptial songs.

Parties Arranged For Mrs. Dent

Mrs. Stanley Hubert Dent of Washington, D. C., will arrive next week to be the guest of Mrs. James L. Castleman, in College Park, and during open week she will be with Mrs. James L. Hickey and will be the honor guest at a series of delightful entertainments. Mrs. Castleman will entertain at luncheon Wednesday, April 22 at the Piedmont club, and covers will be laid for twenty guests. Mrs. Hickey will be hostess at luncheon at the Piedmont club, Monday, April 21 and thirty-five guests will be invited to meet Mrs. Dent. Mr. and Mrs. Hickey will entertain at the dinner-dance at the Piedmont club Tuesday, April 23, inviting twelve friends to meet the guest of honor. Mr. and Mrs. Castleman will entertain fourteen guests at the dinner dance at the Capital City club on Thursday, April 23.

Pan-Hellenic in Macon

An interesting event of Monday was a large and enthusiastic gathering of Pan-Hellenic women in the parlors of the Hotel Danmore, in Macon, to discuss plans for the organization of a Macon Pan-Hellenic. The chairman of Sororities of Georgia Federation of Women's clubs gave an outline of the work being done by the Atlanta and Rome Pan-Hellenics, and asked the Macon fraternity women to lend their efforts in organizing the third Pan-Hellenic in the state. Miss Elizabeth Baker, a 1912 graduate of Wesleyan, was elected leader. Among the fraternities represented were Alpha Delta Pi, Chi Omega, Delta Delta Delta, Kappa Delta, Phi Mu, Sigma Sigma Sigma, Zeta Tau Alpha. This Pan-Hellenic will be one of the largest in the state as there are about 400 fraternity women in Macon. The second meeting of the Pan-Hellenic will be held Monday, April 13, at the Hotel Danmore.

Cabaret Tea

W. Rogers, 310 West Peachtree street.

A number of Atlanta's most talented artists will render a delightful program and every effort will be made to make the occasion a pleasant one.

A cordial invitation is extended to the public.

The color scheme of lavender and white was carried out in all details. The centerpieces were of lavender and white hearts in the center. Quantities of dogwood, lilacs and violets were used in the decorations. Punch was served by Miss Mary Lee Wilkins. Miss Lewis was assisted in entertaining by Miss R. M. Herman Fails to Get One Over On Bro. Jacob

Studebaker Salesmen Had Rather Unique Experience in Selling Cars to Schmidt Brothers—Both Landed Sales, However

It is a thoroughly established fact that there are more Schmidts in Milwaukee than in any other American city of similar size. This condition was personally known to J. G. Wollager, who sells Studebaker automobiles in the Wisconsin metropolis. He was therefore not greatly surprised to note one day that a list of prospective customers included two Schmidts.

That afternoon Mr. Wollager called on the Schmidts, six touring cars, and Herman E. Schmidt and family, and took them for a ride. Mr. Schmidt, according to arrangement, Jacob looked at the car as a closed vehicle and as an open body for touring. He admired the perfect fitting of the wheels and he knew Studebaker quality from experience and did not care to fuss with mechanical details which he was ready to take on faith, and bought the car.

Both Schmidts arranged to accept delivery on their cars the following day. Mr. Schmidt, however, under Mr. Wollager's guidance, Herman E. and Jacob, who were waiting. They arrived just as Mr. Deland was turning a new landau over to Jacob. Henry began to walk slowly round his new possession with an approving eye. When he saw the car, he was so impressed that he bumped into Jacob who was also perambulating. The Schmidts then, each other in the car, showing a startled glare.

"Oh, please," said Henry indignantly. "I have bought a new car," replied Jacob in plain English. "I'm not putting anything on your big brother."

Henry thought you were going to buy a smaller car, but you were going to wait till summer before you got yours," replied Jacob. "I'm not putting anything on your big brother."

Henry and Jacob are brothers and business partners in a big Milwaukee enterprise of state-wide reputation, and then each tries to provide a little personal surprise for the other, and then something interferes.

Talladega Team Reports Monday

TALLADEGA, Ala., April 11.—The Talladega Indians will report to Manager Carl Pace for practice next Monday morning. Secretary Hugh P. McAdams having written or wired the following men to be on hand on the 11th: L. L. Watters, of Howard college, Birmingham; White, of Dothan; Soke, of Andalus, Fla.; Hammon, of Talladega; Hickey, from Murfreesboro, Tenn.; Barker, from Houston, Tex.; Carl, from Oxford, B. F. M. of Valdosta, Ga.; J. T. Cope and G. C. Roberts, two outfielders from Guntersville, Wash. Howell, from Hope Hill, Ala., all of these men are coming to Talladega to their own expense for a trial and if any show signs they will be retained and will have practice along with the regulars who are instructed to report on Monday, April 20.

Among the regulars elected by Manager Pace are the following: Bill McLean, catcher from the Indiana University; James, from Rockwell, Tenn.; Bert, Ind.; Clyde Doyle, of Richmond, Tex., and Abbott, of Columbia, Ga. The regulars for first base, Power, last year's shortstop, and King Phillips, Cleveland, Ohio, will fight out for the short field position; Dan Murray, of Nashville, Tenn., and Gillett, Ark., are candidates for third base. In the outfield the candidates are Howard Camp, a Talladega boy and McLean, from San Antonio, Tex., and Kerlin, from Texas. The manager is also anxious to get three more men, and negotiations are under way with them from various positions.

The pitching staff will be composed of the following candidates: Turner, from the Cairo club, of the Kentucky league; Richard Schwartz, of the Kentucky university; Broadbent, of last year's club; also "Lefty" Woodruff, who will be with the Indians part of last season.

Manager Pace states that he is dictating with several other players who have had the experience and were prominent. At present these two officials are engaged in supervising the grounds and stands and when completed will seat 2,500 people and the Indians will be the best in the history of the local baseball regime.

Frederick C. L. Turner will attend a meeting of the Georgia-Alabama football team in Gadsden or Anniston at which time the schedule for the 1914 season will be adopted and other details arranged. The opening game at Talladega will likely be with Talladega and Anniston as opponents on May 5.

Waycross Plans To Win Trophy

Fans of South Georgia City Expect to Show Largest Attendance on Opening Day

WAYCROSS, Ga., April 11.—"Waycross will win the attendance trophy in the Georgia State league for two seasons—we have the right spirit and we have the people." This is the view of the mayor of the city, who is an ardent baseball fan, takes of the contest that is on in the Georgia State league for the 1914 opening day attendance cup. The mayor is not alone in his belief, because a large number of fans are determined that Waycross will win the cup. Last season Waycross was the league in opening day attendance, Brunswick being second. This season every city in the league wants to head Waycross off, and fans all over the circuit have been on schemes to boost the attendance.

Acting on the request made by league president, J. J. Kaimon, of Americus, Mayor Beaton will issue a proclamation declaring April 16, the opening day in Waycross of the Georgia State league, a half-holiday, and will urge all citizens to aid in the fight to beat five other live Georgia cities in the race for the attendance trophy.

Anticipating a demand for more room to care for the tremendous crowds expected the local association has already built an addition to the grandstand, and has made arrangements to seat several hundred more people on the grandstand, besides enlarging the parking space for automobiles. Many of the boxes have been purchased this far in advance and if weather conditions are anywhere near reasonable there will be an outburst of baseball enthusiasm in Waycross this season which has no city in the state has known in years.

MANY CONFLICTING DATES IN FEDERAL LEAGUE SCHED.

CHICAGO, April 11.—The Federal league, which opens its season this week, will conflict with organized ball in 275 games this year, according to its schedule which was announced here a few days since by President Gilmore. The schedule was adopted practically as drawn up by Secretary Lloyd Rickard, who spent weeks trying to overcome the many difficulties that had to be surmounted before a list acceptable to all the clubs was possible. The impossibility of avoiding conflicts entirely was recognized at the start, but Rickard eliminated many of them that at first it seemed probable would have to stay in the schedule. The fact that Baltimore and Buffalo, for instance, are in one section in the Federal league and in different sections in the International made it impossible to arrange the chart that both clubs would have to play when their competitors were home. Similar conditions govern Kansas City and Indianapolis, and Brooklyn and Pittsburgh.

The greatest number of conflicts take place in St. Louis, where the Federal league will compete with the American and National league teams in seventy games. Chicago is next with about twenty-eight conflicts. Kansas City has thirty-four; Indianapolis about twenty; Pittsburgh, twenty-seven; Baltimore, twenty; Brooklyn, twenty-one; and St. Paul, twenty.

The objection of President Ward, of the Brooklyn team, which prevented its inclusion in the Brooklyn team being added to play double-headers on five Saturdays which preceded the season would naturally run. The opening of the season will spread over several days. Only one game will be played on April 12, when Buffalo opens the season at Baltimore. On April 14 Pittsburgh starts the campaign at home with Brooklyn. On April 15 Indianapolis opens the season at St. Louis and Chicago at Kansas City. Home games in Chicago and Indianapolis will be played first by Kansas City and St. Louis on April 22. Before they play at home the Brooklyn and Buffalo teams will be on the road nearly a month. After the two opening series, they, as well as the Pittsburgh and Baltimore teams, tour the four cities of the western section and will not appear before the fans on their home towns until May 11. Memorial day double-headers will be played by Kansas City at St. Louis, Indianapolis at Chicago; Pittsburgh at Baltimore, and Brooklyn at Buffalo. On July 4, St. Louis plays two games at Kansas City; Chicago at Indianapolis; Buffalo at Brooklyn, and Baltimore at Pittsburgh. On Labor day, St. Louis is at Kansas City; Chicago at Indianapolis; Baltimore at Brooklyn, and Baltimore at Buffalo. The season of 144 games for each club closes October 14.

New England Studebaker dealers have banded into a formal association for mutual welfare and to provide systematic service for the owners of Studebaker cars who tour the region in the summer months. S. Donovan, Studebaker distributor in Boston, is president.

Hard Games on For Riverside

Gainesville Cadets Tackle Boys' High Team on Saturday and G. M. C. Tuesday

GAINESVILLE, Ga., April 11.—On account of the first annual inspection by the United States war department, the Riverside Military academy has not been paying very much attention to football during the past few weeks. This inspection will come off in the next week, and as soon as it is over the Riverside boys will go right to work for their approaching baseball games.

On Saturday, April 11, the first game of the season will come off, when the Atlanta Boys' High school comes to Gainesville for a game. Then on the following Monday and Tuesday, the strong Georgia military college will be played in Gainesville, and on the Saturday of the same week, the Richmond academy, from Augusta, will play them in Gainesville. This gives Riverside four hard games to be played in one week, and with only one week to practice for them.

Coach Anderson of the team, has made several changes in his line-up due to several causes. At the backstop position, Jones, from Columbus, Ga., is now rated as a first baseman, and he is shown in the position excellently. After Montgomery was forced to leave school on account of protracted illness, Coach Anderson developed Jones into a first starter. Morris, Miller, Driggers and Page are the four men that Coach Anderson has developed to fill the outfield, and of them give promise of being good ones.

The infield is composed of Holliman at first, who is a first-year man; Holliman at second, who was in school last year and played this place; Strupper, at short, was with Stone Mountain last year, and is holding down this place very acceptably, and Smith at third, who also was with Stone Mountain last year. Captain Carraway, in center, is the only old man that is back and playing the outfield. The other two new men are Hardin, in left field, and Smith in right. Both are good players, however, and give promise of developing into good players.

Coaches Anderson and Graham have got ready for this year to get the students out to practice. They will start on Monday, April 13, at 10 o'clock, and in the brief time that has been left for practice have been held. Riverside will bid for the state championship this year on two things, their excellent base running and well-timed hitting. In the brief time that has been left for practice have been held.

John Aiken to Try for Record To LaGrange

John Aiken, the hustling Harley-Davidson dealer, will attempt to make a record ride from Atlanta to Macon and return today. He leaves early in the morning, and rides to Macon, expecting to beat the previous record held by Harry Glenn of 2 hours and 15 minutes, and of course will have to beat the same record coming back.

It is Aiken's intention to make a mark so that other riders can go to it afterwards to try and beat it. When it is considered that the route from Atlanta to Macon is less than three hours. Quite a crowd will be watching out for Aiken's return from Macon in the afternoon about three o'clock, where he will be checked in at 224 Peachtree street.

Three local boys, Charlie Allen, Gene Walton and Bill Simmons, will leave here Monday to report to Manager LaFite, of the LaGrange team of the Georgia-Alabama league. Allen and Simmons are pitchers, and Simmons, with some of the fastest armament in the state, will have to go to Macon while Simmons has played with several city league clubs. Pitcher Walton was with the Tech High team and stands a good chance of sticking in the end of the present college season, according to reports. Jack has been going good this year, and will have a hard fight for a position on LaFite's club.

Jack Donaldson, an infielder, playing with the Yellow Jackets, will sign up with the LaGrange team at the end of the present college season, according to reports. Jack has been going good this year, and will have a hard fight for a position on LaFite's club.

Chalmers 1915 "Light Six"

Our 1915 Demonstrating Car is Here

We beg to announce the arrival of a new Chalmers model—the 1915 "Light Six."

In this new Master "Six" we offer you the latest, and we believe, in many respects, the greatest product of the Chalmers factory.

Here is the most truly sensational "Six" on the market, the car for which thousands have waited.

This 1915 Master "Light Six" offers you for the first time the luxury, smoothness and flexibility of the high-powered "Six" at the low initial cost and with the up-keep economy of any comparable "four."

This new "Light Six" gives you a complete line of the famous Chalmers cars—the Master "Light Six" at $1800 and the larger Master "Six" at $2175. There is now a Chalmers "Six" to suit your every requirement, and we stand ready to prove that, in their classes, these two great cars cannot be equalled within $500 of the Chalmers prices.

No Reason for Buying "Fours" Now

With the appearance of the Chalmers 1915 Master "Light Six," the last reason for driving a "four" has disappeared. For in this 1915 model the Chalmers Company has answered the last arguments of the four-cylinder builders—those of price and economy.

In all the qualities of mechanical smoothness, endurance, silence, flexibility, and good looks, the 1915 "Light Six" is like the larger Master "Six" at $2175.

It has the same T-head, long stroke motor; the same silent operation Chalmers-Enta electric starter which makes the motor non-stallable; the same wonderful flexibility which has earned for Chalmers "Sixes" the title of "one speed" cars. It is a real manufactured car—built complete in Chalmers shops.

But the Master "Light Six" is built expressly for those who want a car of low initial cost and economy of maintenance.

This new "Light Six" is slightly smaller than the Master "Six." That means lower cost and makes possible the astonishingly low price of $1800.

Light for Economy; Heavy Enough for Service

The Master "Light Six" is a lighter car, but not a little car. It is light enough to be easy on tires, economical of fuel and easy to handle. Yet it is not flimsy. It is built heavy enough to assure safety in any emergency and comfort on any road. Don't make the mistake of buying too light a car—for any apparent saving in first cost gained through skimping, is more than offset by the costly repairs which result from too light construction. Medium weight is right weight. The extra gasoline used by a medium weight car as compared with a very light car won't amount to $25 in 10,000 miles. And $25 won't buy many repairs for a car so flimsy that it shakes itself to pieces in ordinary service.

The 1915 "Light Six," like all Chalmers cars, is built to give satisfactory service through many seasons. This latest Chalmers car has a slightly smaller motor than the Master "Six." Yet it develops up to 50 horsepower, giving all the speed and all the power you will ever want in a car of this size. No car of equal motor and car size will show greater mileage per gallon of gasoline.

High Priced Features; Low Cost

Though the price of the 1915 Master "Light Six" is only $1800 it has all the features of high-priced cars. Such, for instance, as: 6-cylinder in bloc motor with small bore and long stroke; cork insert disc clutch; left drive and center control; interlocking transmission gears which can't slip or be accidentally shifted; combination splash and direct oil; cellular radiator; diamond-hard Tungsten steel valves; exclusive Chalmers design molded oval fenders; underslung spare tire; non-shock motor; Chalmers-Enta electric starter; tires carried at rear, giving absolutely clear running boards; the newest design streamline body with flush fitting doors; electric lights and horn. In a word, every feature of advanced construction and equipment which most cars in the $2000 class will not have for another year.

A Year Ahead of Others

These are a few of the reasons why experts have declared this 1915 Chalmers "Light Six" the last word in medium priced 6-cylinder construction, and why you will find no car in the same class within $500 of the price to equal the 1915 Master "Light Six."

The other reasons why the Master "Light Six" is one year ahead of all other cars in its class, we'll be glad to tell you in the Chalmers Standard Road Test. We are now arranging demonstrations, and can make prompt delivery if you place your order as soon as the 1915 "Light Six" has convinced you. At least do yourself the justice of a thorough inspection of the one "Light Six" which is a year ahead of others.

Third Endurance Run for Sunday

Local Motorcyclists Will Cover New Route, Including Rome, Cedartown and Other Points

At the regular meeting of the Atlanta Motorcyclists club held Friday night at 224 Peachtree street, it was decided to hold the third and last of a series of three endurance contests on April 15. This run will cover a distance of 150 miles and will leave from No. 124 Peachtree street on the morning of April 15 at 7 o'clock, going to Dallas, Rockmart, Cedartown, Cave Springs and Rome, and leaving Rome to go to Carverville and Marietta, arriving back in Atlanta in the evening at 7:30.

In addition to the regular control of each of the above named points, there will be possibly five secret controls. A regular schedule between these controls will be maintained with a ten minutes rest at each control. Any rider receiving outside assistance in any manner will be penalized. No points will be given for riders leaving from their machines or allowing their machines to fall on the ground or striking their machines up any hill or through any brush or over any part of the route, the breaking of any part of the chain, the breaking of any part of the wheels or any other part of the machine will be penalized.

Judge Examines Machines.
Before the riders leave from the first control, their machines are examined by the judges, and after their return in the evening, their machines are checked in, and the rider who covers the entire trip without having any of his parts or machine in any possible points against him is awarded the perfect score of 1,000 points.

Considerable interest is being centered in the particular contest with such as the combined score of the three runs will be the winner of the contest and the best score. In the previous two runs, the best score was made by A. Parham, who rides a Harley-Davidson. L. Hudson, who rides a Thor, and H. W. Smith, who rides a Harley-Davidson, were the runners up.

It was decided at the meeting on Friday night that the third run will be held on the 21st of April, where the three runs will be awarded to the rider having the best average score on the three runs. This third run has attracted considerable interest among the motorcycle riders of Atlanta, and it is expected that there will be about fifty riders who will participate. HENDERSON COMING STAR IN THE BILLIARD WORLD

CHICAGO, April 11.—Look out for William Henderson!

Who on earth is William Henderson? Well, William Henderson is a dark horse in the amateur billiard world. He is a member of the Chicago board of trade and has been discovered by Charles Frederick Conklin, former national and international amateur billiard champion.

When Conklin withdrew from the amateur ranks he, in partnership with William Burdick, opened a billiard room on Jackson boulevard, directly across the street from the board of trade. At least Conklin and Burdick acquired the room which had formerly been occupied by Charles H. Waghman, president of the Chicago Federal league baseball club. It was here that Conklin first met the champion.

So impressed was Conklin with the natural, fine swinging stroke of Henderson that he displayed a keen interest in the grain roller from the start. Taking him on for a game, Conklin found the dark horse a worthy opponent, and the old champion had to step right along to beat him. Conklin averaged 9, while Henderson's clip was a trifling under 8.

HENDERSON BECOMES PUPIL. From that moment Henderson became a pupil of Conklin, and an apt one at that. His style needed correcting, and he was a hit on his draw and masses, but in general his work was good and he possessed all the carmies of a champion.

Now Conklin has sometimes to travel at a 20 average to beat the new comer in the amateur field and only last week Henderson took Charles Frederick's measure in a 40-point game at 15:2 ball hit. In that contest Henderson averaged 15, and had the high run of the game, a well accomplished compilation of 124.

Henderson, though a man of forty years or better, has shown such marked improvement under the earnest tutelage of the former amateur champion that Conklin is willing to wager a good hat national tournament next year, feeling that he will have an excellent chance to carry off the championship. And Conklin is willing, toward a good hat right now that his protégé will not finish worse than third in the big event of 1915.

Conklin also thinks that Charles Hadden, the Dowagiac, Mich. player who won the high run prize in the recent 40-point game, is a worthy opponent, and the old champion had to step right along to beat him. Conklin averaged 9, while Henderson's clip was a trifling under 8.

And Conklin is willing, toward a good hat right now that his protégé will not finish worse than third in the big event of 1915.

Conklin also thinks that Charles Hadden, the Dowagiac, Mich. player who won the high run prize in the recent 40-point game, is a worthy opponent, and the old champion had to step right along to beat him. Conklin averaged 9, while Henderson's clip was a trifling under 8.

Motorcycle Is Now Widely Used

President of Hendee Manufacturing Company Talks of Merits of Two-Wheeled Motor Conveyance

"Fifteen years ago we were going through one of the greatest crises ever known in the history of sport," says President George M. Hendee, of the Hendee Manufacturing company. "It was bicycling. Young and old—rich and poor—man, woman, and child—were using this two-wheeled vehicle as the one predominant machine for amusement and health. The era of the bicycle was an era of acquaintance with American outdoor sports to millions of people who otherwise would have scarcely known the wonders and delights of their country."

"This selfsame era is repeating itself today by means of the motorcycle. But with an undreamed-of comfort and tenfold pleasure."

"One is the fatigue of pedaling up hills and against head winds—all the exertions of cycling have disappeared and which will likely be out in the front fighting for the pennant right from the start-off. Baltimore opens the season April 13 with Buffalo."

"Not that a motorcyclist needs fine roads, steep grades, and the narrow space, rough surfaces mean nothing to this machine. It has the power, control and comfort for an automobile—positive features too, as realized by those who have not given the motorcycle a careful consideration. On the other hand, the running cost of a motorcycle is very low. Sixty-five miles on a gallon of oil, or a hundred miles on a gallon of gas, are average performance. Repair charges are correspondingly low. Official reports of the Detroit police motorcycle squad using Indian motorcycles show the average cost of upkeep per machine to be $2.18 for 100 miles."

"The motorcycle needs no garage, and requires a minimum of care. It is always ready to take you to any point within a twenty-five-mile radius within an hour's time. Throw a leg over the middle-sit a twist of the wrist—and you're gone. You are master of the machine whether throttling down to a snail's pace in congested traffic or opening up to sixty miles an hour on a cleared road."

JOE HARANG, NEW ORLEANS BATTLER, SHOWS PROMISE

Classy featherweights are few and far between at present and the crop is only the class that is poised by John J. Kilbane. Promoters and sportscasters throughout the country have searched in vain for a boy of sufficient class to promise development into a championship possibility.

The majority of featherweights of the present are near lightweight scarcely able to do better than 124 at 3 o'clock and would never make 132 at ring-side. Besides all of these boys are small in stature, and have no imagination and few possess any real class. Down in New Orleans, however, springing a youngster that has real promise from his performance against the featherweights who are ranked next to the champion. Only recently this boy, Joe Harang, won referee decisions over Cal Delaney and Gene Delmont at Memphis which is certainly proof of some class. Delaney has beaten Matt Brock and a number of other good boys and Delmont defeated Jack White at Memphis and he is starting in Philadelphia.

Little has been heard of Harang since he was defeated by Matt Brock at New Orleans and Memphis. Time was when fighting was only a side line with the little Frenchman who fought with the Irish Channel and then he trained at night and worked as a bookkeeper by the day time, but now he is seeking recognition as a championship contender and he is starting on a campaign which he confidently hopes will ultimately bring him a match with Kilbane at 122 lbs.

Harang has some natural advantages in height and reach that are not possessed by most of the featherweights of the present and stands 5 feet 8 inches and weighs 122 pounds. He is a native of Ireland and is a native of Ireland and is a native of Ireland and is a native of Ireland.

Dakota Dealer Makes Big Hit
The Minot Auto company, distributors of Overland cars in Minot, N. D., and vicinity, hit on an interesting method of demonstrating the worth of their product at the mid-winter fair held recently in the western city. This was a non-stop run in which the motor car of the Overland company was started on the day of the fair, and was allowed to run continuously for 12 hours, or six days, the fair was in progress. One of the conditions of the run was that no adjustments or repairs were to be made and the motor came through with colors flying.

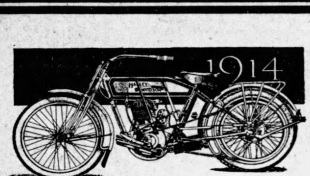

Not a single bolt was laid on the engine during the entire run and records made in other ways were remarkable. The end of the run was not only in perfect running condition, but under high speed, and less than a glass of water was evaporated from the radiator in keeping the motor cool. Competent officials who watched the run were of the opinion that the motor was running more smoothly and developing more power at the end of the run than at the start.

In commenting on the performance, Mr. W. J. Murray, of Brooklyn, N. Y., said: "It reminds me of that old superlative advertisement we used to see. 'The longer you wear 'em, the better they get.'"

Mr. W. J. Murray, the first Federal league sixth place pitcher, was seen by an interested spectator at a game in New Orleans.

How Goodyear Fights Loose Treads

After we ended rim-cutting we took up loose treads—another major tire trouble. At the base of the tread in every tire there must be a breaker strip. In all tires save Goodyears this strip is made of closely-woven fabric. And road use often separates this breaker strip from the rubber.

We bought the rights to a patent fabric which we picture here. It costs us $50,000, and it forms our breaker strip. This fabric rivets itself to the rubber. The tread rubber is forced down through these openings, while in a plastic state, forming hundreds of large rubber rivets. Then the whole tire is vulcanized en masse.

This lessens by 60 per cent the risk of this tread separation. And no other maker employs it.

Millions Saved
That is one way in which we save tire users millions of dollars yearly. Another is our "No-Air" cure. No-Rim-Cut tires.

THE GOODYEAR TIRE & RUBBER COMPANY, AKRON, OHIO

Any Dealer can supply you Goodyear Tires. If the wanted size is not in stock he will telephone our Local Branch.

Cut tires are final-cured on air bags, under actual road conditions. This saves the countless blow-outs due to wrinkled fabric. This extra process costs us $1,500 daily, and no other maker employs it.

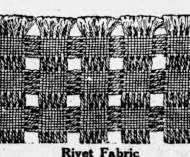

In these tires alone is rim-cutting ended in a satisfactory way. We control the method.

And these tires alone have our double-thick All-Weather tread—a smooth-running anti-skid.

16 Makes Cost More
No-Rim-Cut tires are the only tires embodying these costly features.

After years of tests on countless cars they have come to outlast any other tire in the world.

Yet there are 16 makes of tires which sell at higher prices. Some nearly one-half higher. Three such tires cost as much as four Goodyears. That's a curious situation.

Precedence

The Hupmobile takes precedence in low cost of operation—in gas and oil economy, in tire economy, in repair economy. It excels in these most important features because Hup engineers, scientifically applying the small-bore, long-stroke principle, build throughout for quality and long life and untiring service, and for them alone.

One Cent Per Mile

And because of these things, Hupmobiles uniformly command a price higher by 25 to 40 per cent. in the second hand market.

The Hup owner figures depreciation at an average of one cent per mile traveled. Isn't that an unanswerable argument for good motor car investment?

Atlanta Spring Real Estate Review

STORY OF NORTH SIDE TOLD IN PICTURE AND IN TEXT

Mayor Woodward's Theory of Why Cities Grow North and East—New Subdivisions Opened in Various North Side Sections—Handsome Homes That Have Been Built There. Splendid Roads That Have Made the Country Famous

IN a talk made not long ago to the members of the Atlanta Real Estate board at one of their monthly luncheons, Mayor Woodward offered a plausible explanation of north side values.

He prefaced his remarks by saying that in nearly all cities the most rapid growth was in a northern or western direction, and he named several of the largest American cities in proof of his remark.

He explained this tendency by saying that most of the breezes came from the north and west, and that homeseekers constantly went further and further out in an effort to get as near possible to the fresh air currents.

Consequently they moved north and east, meeting the breezes half way so to speak, searching for places which would have the advantage of fresh air unpolluted by dust and smoke in its passage over the settled part of the city.

WEST IN ATLANTA

BARRIED BY RAILROADS
Continuing his argument, the mayor pointed out that the people of Atlanta in common with those of other growing cities, pushed northward in search of fresh air.

In Atlanta's case they pushed north because the west was barred by an intricate network of railroad tracks, which extended from the depot to a point far out in the country.

Consequently the homeseekers were forced to push northward. The close-in north side becoming crowded, they pushed further and further out.

Then, as the west was still barred to them, they began to overflow to the east, and consequently the extensive residence movement began to flow in two directions.

SECTION EMBRACED IN ATLANTA'S NORTH SIDE

Not so long ago the north side ended rather abruptly at Sixth street, and at the same time Ponce de Leon avenue had not been opened any further than the ball park.

Now the north side extends up to Chamblee, in DeKalb county, along Peachtree road, and to the Decatur court house along Ponce de Leon avenue. Out in the country the western trend meets another natural barrier in the form of the Chattahoochee river.

Nowadays real estate agents, in referring to the north side, mean all that territory lying between the railroads on the west and the Georgia railroad on the east.

Any property referred to in that section, except in some special community, is referred to as north side property.

Consequently the country around Ponce de Leon avenue and Druid Hills is generally classified as north side.

BUILDING DEVELOPMENT FOLLOWED MAIN STREETS

Confining the attention to the original north side, the first outward development took place on Peachtree street.

Only a few years ago the city limits ended at Sixth street. People, however, who liked the country, began to build homes on Peachtree beyond Sixth street.

By gradual degrees they got as far as Fourteenth street, then to Brookwood, where the present city limits are, and now they are going on further.

Meanwhile the side streets developed also, so that the territory out West Peachtree street and Spring street, west of Peachtree, and on Juniper street and Piedmont avenue, and Myrtle street, was developed solidly.

Pretty soon the Fourteenth street limit, considered extremely suburban not so long ago, was built up to uniformly, and the north side was settled east and west as well as north and south.

RESIDENCE SECTIONS

RAPID DEVELOPMENT
Comparisons are best obtained by referring to familiar institutions. The development of Ansley Park, for instance, was barely started ten years ago, whereas now that section is within the city limits, with all street improvements down and solidly built up.

Twelve years ago it was a farm on the suburban outskirts of Atlanta. Now it is a continuation of the city. Brookwood, which is now in the city limits, less than four years ago was a remote suburb. Buckhead, a few years ago a detached Georgia town, is now a suburb of Atlanta.

Less than ten years ago the development of Druid Hills was started. Now a considerable part of that is in the city limits and built up with expensive residences. The subdivision itself extends to Decatur, and the city of Atlanta has grown up solidly to it.

FUTURE ADDITIONS

COMPARING THE FUTURE WITH THE PAST, it is not so remarkable that so much country acreage in North Fulton is being subdivided to meet the future demands of the city.

The section around Ansley Park ten years ago was as far out, relatively speaking, as the Brookhaven and Silver Lake sections are today. In not so many years these sections will be part of the city of Atlanta.

GOOD ROADS AND AUTOS HELPED ADVANCE

As pointed out in a previous article, the advent of the automobile, and the building of good roads, has much to do with carrying Atlanta's development so far out.

No finer roads exist in the south today than those on the north side of Fulton county, and the automobile has made the remote farm of ten years ago seem no further away than a close-in suburb.

Consequently what used to be merely a summer home, to be used only a few months during the year, has become the year around habitation.

HOW VARIOUS ROADS CONNECT TERRITORIES

The various subdivisions of the north side, as well as the residence colonies already built, are connected across wide spaces by a perfect system of roads.

A subdivision as far east as Decatur can be put into communication with Silver Lake through Clairmont avenue and connecting main thoroughfares.

All the main roads are bisected by other thoroughfares running east and west or north and south, or by circular driveways.

Thus it is possible for an automobilist on one afternoon's trip to visit every important community in the entire section.

J. K. OTTLEY RESIDENCE ON PEACHTREE

This is Mr. Ottley's new home on Peachtree road, near Buckhead. Particular care has been taken in constructing it to go with the beautiful grounds, which it commands from a fine elevation.

MANY NEW APARTMENTS BUILDING ON THE NORTH SIDE

Several Are Under Construction and Permits Have Been Asked for Others

When Joseph Gatins not very long ago conceived the idea of building a hotel at Peachtree street and Ponce de Leon avenue, people thought he was going into the country.

However, he built the hotel. That was the beginning of a wholesale hotel and apartment house invasion on the north side.

Pretty soon, Albert Howell, Jr., built the ten-story Ponce de Leon apartment house across the street from the Terrace. This started a fresh invasion, and now the north side is noted for its apartment houses.

Like Atlanta office buildings, Atlanta apartment houses in good residence districts are soon rented, and the demand for apartments continues strong.

Since The Journal last printed a group of pictures showing newly completed apartment houses on the north side, there have followed announcements of still more.

Tom Swift and F. E. Mackle have started to work on a $60,000 apartment house at Juniper and Third streets, which will be completed late in the summer.

John D. Babbage, Jr., it is at work on a $60,000 apartment house on La Fayette drive, in Ansley Park, which will be one of the most attractive in the city.

A most unique apartment house will soon be started on Fourteenth street at the corner of Piedmont avenue, a large corner which has the attractive outlook of Piedmont Park in front of it.

Several men who found housekeeping income planned to move into apartments. That they might be sure of getting exactly the kind of apartment they wanted, they conceived the idea of building one to order.

So they formed a company and bought the Piedmont avenue corner. Now each member of the company will have its own apartment built to order, to say nothing of being able to dictate what other tenants shall occupy the rest of the building.

Several smaller apartment houses are being built on the north side, and there seems to be no end of the let up in demand for them.

Oglethorpe Tracts to Be Sold at Auction Monday

Several Have Already Been Sold at Private Sale, and 7,000 Feet of Additional Frontage Will Be Ready to Offer by Monday—Mr. Ansley Makes Proposal of Interest to the Brookhaven Club—Other Facts About Park

On Monday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, Edwin P. Ansley will offer at auction some of the choicest of the acreage tracts in his big subdivision of Oglethorpe Park.

This will afford the public an opportunity of buying at its own price building sites in this new subdivision.

S. E. Davidson, salesmanager of the Ansley agency, has sold at private sale $25,000 worth of the tracts, and by Monday 7,000 feet of additional frontage will have been laid off and ready to offer.

An additional large force of graders, with dynamite and steam shovels, is now at work on Oglethorpe drive, the main boulevard through Oglethorpe park, one of the big real estate achievements of Edwin P. Ansley.

Tracts facing this drive have already been sold, and the work is being pushed to rapid completion.

This boulevard will extend through the S. C. Stovall property, past the Capital City club, and through the Hart estate, lying just north of the Brookhaven club estate and the country club, thence into DeKalb county, and, through one land lot, to the Oglethorpe university grounds and Silver Lake properties.

Proceeding then it will go on a direct route to Chamblee, and, extending north by way of Peachtree road, with a network of lateral drives leading in every direction, complete the system.

MR. WILL OFFER TRACTS.
Mr. Ansley conceived the idea that, instead of offering to the investor merely a vacant lot, he would offer acreage in Oglethorpe park.

So the properties will make only a few tracts of two to five acres each. Each will be developed on its own merit, and a building site chosen.

The route selected is on a ridge higher than any part of Peachtree road, and overlooks the entire country. The park has the admiration of some of the best landscape artists in the entire country.

R. F. Maddox says that the Capital City club will undoubtedly exercise its option on the Brookhaven club property. In this connection Mr. Ansley offers a suggestion. He says:

MR. ANSLEY'S SUGGESTION.
"If the club had a beautiful site on which to erect its permanent club, I believe its members would quickly subscribe to a bond issue to pay for such a club, and to induce the street car company to extend its car line to said site."

"Mr. Stovall has agreed to donate the lot or tract marked 'B' adjoining the club property, and I am willing to donate the tract marked 'C' for a club site, and I am also willing to co-operate with Mr. Stovall in grading the driveway marked 'Club Drive' across the club's property and that agreed to be donated to it, provided the club will secure an extension of the Peachtree and Brookhaven car line from its present terminus to the north line of the property agreed to be donated to the club by me."

"For the consideration named, and in order for its club to secure additional land for its new golf course, at a point where the new links are very much congested, I am willing to deed to the club the tract on the north side of the driveway marked 'Club Drive' on the plat, provided the club agrees to maintain said tract for club purposes, such as golf links and park."

"The driveway marked 'Club Drive' could connect the present and proposed new club building, both with electric and an automobile drive. The driveways shown on the plat will furnish the most attractive driving system in the south."

"As Oglethorpe park will soon have nine or ten driveways into it, a few weeks' work will convert from wide fields, laps and limbs, into a beautiful suburban residence section."

"When the Piedmont Driving club burned, a few years ago, I offered my present home site (then in the rough) and forty acres adjoining, for a golf course, in exchange for its present five-acre site. Some of its members, noted at the proposition. Since that time, dozens of these same members have come to me and said:

REASONS FOR ATLANTA'S GROWTH

Fourteen railroad systems, reaching every city and town in every direction, promoting commercialism throughout the entire United States.

The rapid immigration of the Northern and Western farmer to our vast area of farm lands.

This state can hold two million more people on our farms alone.

There are nine different climates in the United States and Georgia has eight of them.

Within a radius of 300 miles of Atlanta the bank deposits are over four hundred millions.

Within a radius of 300 miles of Atlanta there are now ten millions of people.

Within a radius of 300 miles of Atlanta the resources are tremendous in minerals, farming, stock raising, lumbering—in fact, all of the pursuits of man, and these resources are not yet half developed.

Within 300 miles of Atlanta there are tremendous water powers. Some few have been developed, but there are many more to be developed, which means cheap power, and also means that this section will get many millions of investments in industries and manufacturing plants.

Atlanta is a Regional Bank City. A Regional Bank means that our farm lands are good collateral for loans. The REGIONAL BANK means the building up of many of the above mentioned resources. Atlanta's bankers are bankers of the highest type, able to go into any financial center and bring to Atlanta any kind of financial aid when the occasion requires it.

Atlanta's men and women and their energy are really our greatest asset.

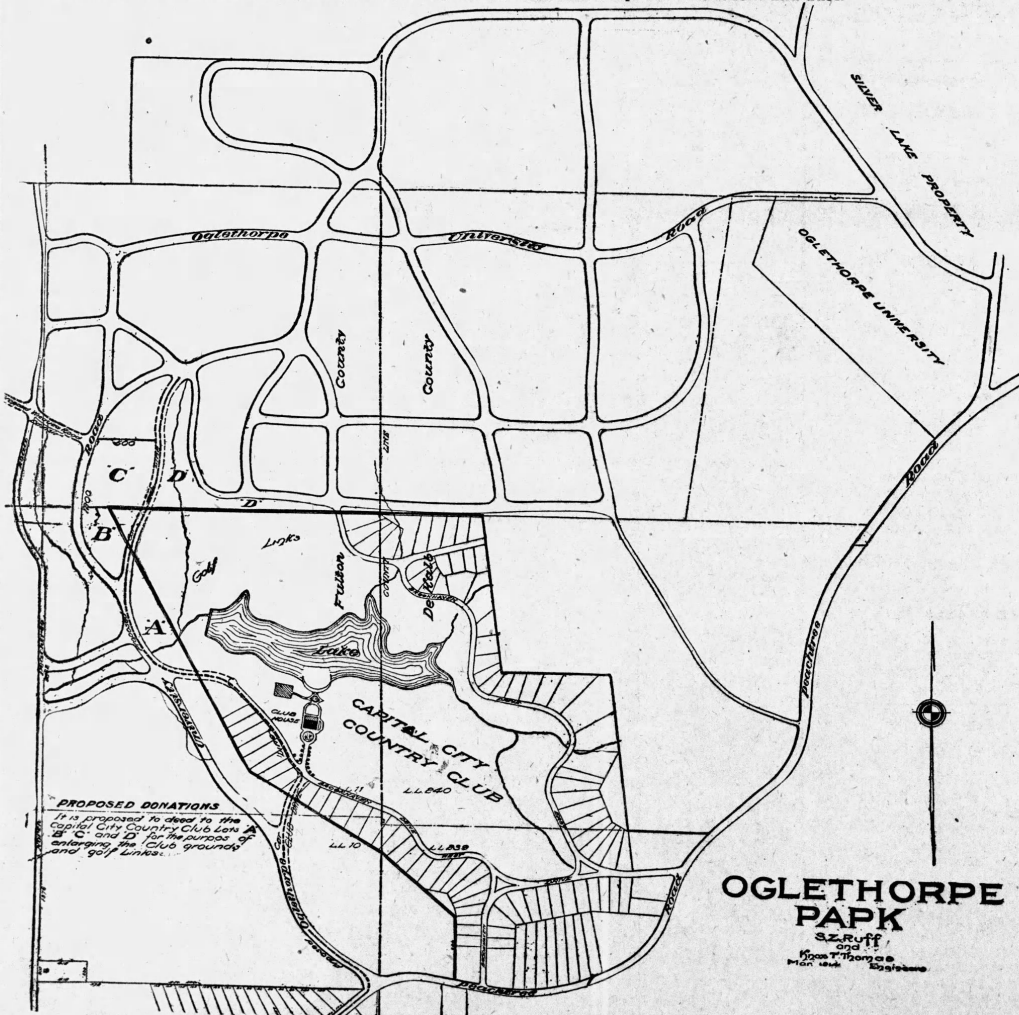

The consistent, careful saver, and the cautious investor, can always believe in Atlanta investments.

ATLANTA WILL STAY PUT.

The Panama Canal has caused every great railroad system to build or acquire a right-of-way through our section to the gulf. Commercialism of every type is swirling SOUTHWARD, until Atlanta is the headquarters of nearly every industry of the entire United States and of many foreign countries.

All of the above facts are fairly squeezing values into Atlanta property and there is a greater percentage of high-salaried and profit-sharing men in Atlanta today than any other city in the United States of the same population.

The back-to-nature idea is the principle of country homes—out and away from the smoke and dust.

This plat shows the driveways in and around Capital City Country Club; the entrance to Oglethorpe Park, by way of University Road, to Oglethorpe University and Silver Lake property and the Country Club for permanent club site, and for additional golf links.

Oglethorpe University will be built.

There will be 1500 students and 100 instructors.

This will make a city.

A college center is a refined, cultured body.

This means a small city where now only forest and bramble thickets exist.

The Capital City Country Club has taken over Brookhaven and is spending thousands of dollars adding to the beauty and making an 18 hole golf course.

The Capital City Club represents a great part of the wealth, brains and hustle of our business life in Atlanta.

This crowd of men are doers of deeds, drawers of water.

They mean to have the finest Country Club possible.

The North Side is where our best values lie.

A lot sold three years ago to H. S. Harper, Ansley Park, when the lot was in the rough, for $3,000.00. Mr. Harper has since sold half of the lot for $19,000.

North Side property makes many such advantages possible.

50 acres of land six years ago, near Oglethorpe Park, sold for $1900.00. Today the same tract is worth $150,000.00.

In six years more what will land between Brookhaven and Oglethorpe University be worth?

In this section is where Atlanta's best citizens will make their country homes.

Mr. Rich Man, this is your look.

Mr. Saver, here is where you can play with the rich man.

To buy Oglethorpe Park is to back the biggest most successful city builder anywhere in the South.

Never-quit-Ansley says that there will be more development in this section than all the rest of Atlanta put together.

Peachtree Road is a marvel of beauty and culture, paved to Oglethorpe Park.

The entrance to the Park from Peachtree will be through Oglethorpe University Drive, and 200 feet wide. The main road from the opening will be 400 feet wide.

A 20-foot private right-of-way will be provided for the car line.

All roads will be brought to proper grades.

On the top of a high, rolling slope, a tract of land has been offered the Capital City Club for a permanent club site, which tract will be of great value to the club in years to come.

Who does not believe in the Regional Bank City—ATLANTA?

If we had a good town before, we now have the greatest strength possible to be added to us.

R. F. Maddox

"I am further willing to co-operate with you in grading the driveway marked 'Club Drive' its entire length and deeding to the Club lots or tracts marked on the Oglethorpe Park plat as lots A and D."

An Editorial from Atlanta Constitution

"Mr. Ansley is a man who does not go off half cocked. He has only to point to what he has done in the phenomenal Ansley Park and Forsyth street projects, to submit convincing testimony of his qualifications as a practical prophet. In every enterprise he has attempted he has proven to be an advance agent of expansion and progress. His name is synonymous with success."

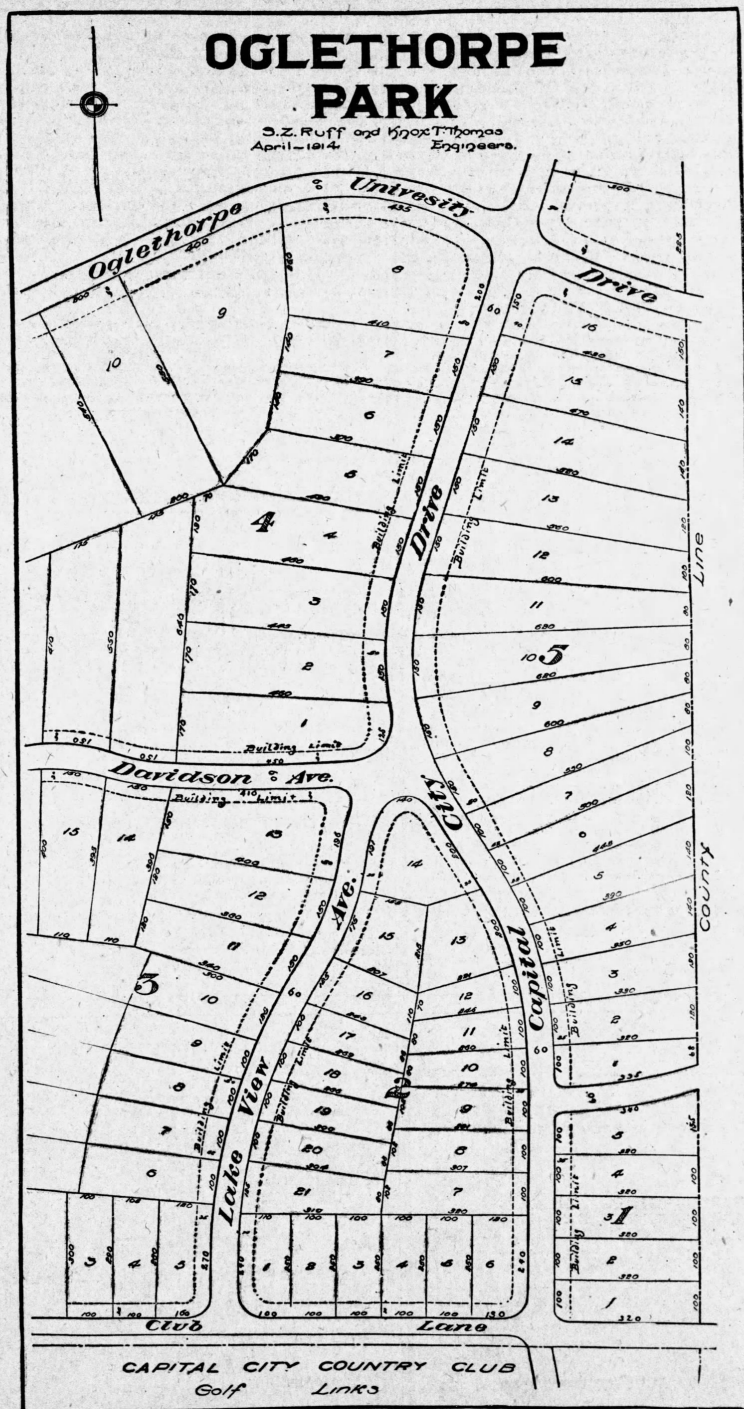

A Clipping from Atlanta Georgian About Oglethorpe University

"An expert survey has been made of the grounds with a view of breaking dirt for the proposed building. The topographical survey is now under progress and will soon be submitted to the landscape artists who are to construct the most beautiful grounds possessed by any Southern educational institution."
"The University now possesses a half million in cash and real estate. Contributions are still coming in at an average of $10,000 monthly."

ENDORSEMENTS OF OGLETHERPE PARK AND ITS BENEFITS

ATLANTA, GEORGIA, April 11th, 1914.

TO THE INVESTING PUBLIC:

Oglethorpe Park is a "creature of accident." Its development was begun on "Friday the Thirteenth" (13th) of March, and the first installment of lots will be sold at auction to the "highest bidder" on "Friday the Thirteenth" (13th) of April, 1914. If there is any had on "Thirteenth" (13th) I must suffer the consequences.

I abandoned the development outlined in Mr. H. E. Holtzman's letter at Ft. Myers, Fla., because of the lack of co-operation of "one" property owner.

I abandoned a similar development at Sarasota, Florida, because of the lack of co-operation of "one" property owner.

I have been my experience in all my development enterprises that the parties who were most benefited, gave me the least co-operation.

I was asked to develop the "Hart Estate" in Land Lot No. 12 Fulton County immediately North of the Capital City Country Club, and fronting 1,600 feet on the Peachtree and Dunwoody (North Peachtree) Road, which is now being widened and graded by the county) into acreage tracts, suitable for the public's demands.

In seeking to find the best plans for developing the Hart property I sent on Mr. S. Z. Huff, the Engineer who helped me develop Ansel Park, and he laid out the system of "Driveways" shown on the "Drive-way Map," which together with the two points of greatest interest in the public mind just at this time, viz: The Capital City Country Club and the site of Oglethorpe University.

Within the limited time between March 13th and April 13th, we have not been able to grade the complete "Driveway System" plan, and shown, but you can get your own agent to take you in his automobile and enter the "Temporary Road" at Sam Stovall's private entrance at the end of the Peachtree car line and follow that "Temporary Road" until you reach the lots immediately North of the Capital City Club Golf Links, planned to be sold at Auction Monday the Thirteenth (13th) at 3 P. M. You will be surprised at what you find.

I GUARANTEE to bring all the roads shown on the "Driveway System" to a proper grade, and I would never be able to look the splendid men, who gave me the endorsement herewith presented in the face, if I failed to carry out any plans that I present to the public. They and nearly one hundred similar endorsements have been the sole inspiration for the strenuous I have been through in the past thirty days.

The opening of the "Baseball Season" on Tuesday, and engagements in New York and Florida, force me to offer the lots for sale at auction on Monday the 13th at 3 P. M. In the Rough, as I did the first lots on Peachtree street in Ansel Park, April 4th, 1904; but my "loss" is your "gain."

If I keep my promise to perfect the "Driveway System" Mr. Huff has outlined, even a few weeks will make a great difference in the value of the lots to be sold to the "highest bidder" Monday the 13th at 3 P. M.

All I ask is that you go out and look at the property, either with your own agent in your own automobile, or allow us to take you over the property from the end of the Peachtree Car Line to an automobile.

Thanking the Citizens of Atlanta for their splendid support in all my development enterprises, and hoping to merit their continued support, I am, Yours for the Upbuilding of Atlanta.

EDWIN P. ANSLY.

The Atlanta Journal Daily, Sunday, Semi-Weekly JAMES R. GRAY PRESIDENT AND EDITOR

Atlanta, Ga., March 28, 1914.

My Dear Mr. Ansel:

I have just examined with great interest the plan for developing Oglethorpe University site. The plan is a most attractive and admirably named "Oglethorpe Park."

In my opinion it is one of the most important developments that have been made in Atlanta in years. The site is a beautiful one, its location and its access to the city from Peachtree road and the numerous winding drives which have laid out, make it most attractive.

I am glad you have undertaken this development. It remains for this project to be directed by your splendid intelligence and energy to successful accomplishment.

I am especially pleased because of the proximity of this beautiful park to Oglethorpe University. It will add greatly to the attractiveness of the university grounds, and in this and other ways will be a great advantage to the institution.

We have practically half a million dollars with which to begin the construction of Oglethorpe University, and expect to have a grand deed done. In a short time, just as soon as certain preliminary details can be satisfactorily determined, we shall begin the work of erection. The establishment of Oglethorpe park is a most important step in the development of the city, and we are to deal with it and to add attraction to the park.

Your splendid enterprise appeals to me as a citizen of Atlanta, and I cannot refrain from expressing to you my warm commendations in carrying out the plan that you have undertaken.

Very truly yours,
JAMES R. GRAY,
President of Board of Trustees Oglethorpe University.

Atlanta, Ga., April 1, 1914.

My Dear Mr. Ansel:

Oglethorpe Park—Of all the real estate developments in Atlanta during the past twenty years, I believe none offers better opportunities than the Oglethorpe Park movement and the immediate adjoining enterprises. All of which practically united affect some 1,600 acres of the most valuable property as adjoins any city in the United States.

It was inevitable when the Capital City Club took over the Brookhaven Country Club with its wonderful surroundings that every acre in that immediate section should be brought once into the public eye for development. A highland residence section. The movement was crystallized and shaped when the Oglethorpe University movement assumed definite shape, securing the establishment of a great southern university on the Silver Lake property. If any doubt remained, it was necessary to assure the success of the movement was the touch of your master hand as a developer.

The story of your work in transforming Ansel Park from a wilderness to one of the handsomest residence sections of Atlanta is known throughout the country, as is also your splendid development of the Forsyth street section. Which a few years ago has become one of the most active business sections of the city, with property valuations increased. I understand, over 1,000 per cent in five years.

Now that you have taken hold of the extensive development plan of the property lying between the Capital City Country Club and the Oglethorpe University, the transformation of the whole section into an aggregation of beautiful country estates is assured.

Nature has done everything possible in contributing to the beauty of this section, and you are fortunate in being able to secure the services of Mr. S. Z. Huff, whose ability has been demonstrated in the handsomest of Ansel Park and Druid Hills. Mr. Huff is an artist of rare ability and he is fortunate in having such a splendid subject for development.

Your plans furnish additional inspiration for the further development of the Capital City Club. Its golf course is already one of the best, and the additional acreage offered will make it as perfect as any in the country.

The club will assist you in every possible way to secure the extension of the electric car line, which in the very nature of things will be extended to the club and to Oglethorpe University.

It is gratifying that the other real estate developments in that section are cooperating with you just as you are cooperating with them, and with the combination the results will be no doubt equally gratifying as have been the result of your efforts on the Forsyth street and Ansel Park properties.

Very truly yours,
CLARK HOWELL.

Atlanta, Ga., April 4, 1914.

My Dear Mr. Ansel:

I am a constant visitor at the Capital City golf course, and many times have gone over the section adjoining the club's property, which you have named "Oglethorpe Park."

To my mind it is the most beautiful country in all Georgia. The view from the site of the clubhouse is a most attractive one. The altitude of Ansel Park gives the air a rarity which I think equals that of Asheville. I think it equals that of Asheville. I think it equals that of Asheville. I think it equals that of Asheville.

It is gratifying that the other real estate developments in that section are cooperating with you just as you are cooperating with them, and with the combination the results will be no doubt equally gratifying as have been the result of your efforts on the Forsyth street and Ansel Park properties.

PANORAMIC VIEW OF NORTH SIDE LYING BETWEEN PEACHTREE AND NORTH AVENUE

THREE NEW RESIDENCES ARE BEING BUILT AT BROOKHAVEN

They Are on Brookhaven Drive, Facing the Brookhaven Country Club Grounds—Brookhaven Estates Acquires Land to Protect Exclusiveness of Its Lots and to Preserve the High Residential Character of the Community

Three extensive residences are now being erected on Brookhaven drive fronting the Brookhaven Country club. One, to cost $15,000, is being built by L. T. D. Quinby, and the other two by Gude & Co., for clients.

The Brookhaven Estates, which is represented by the Charles P. Glover Realty company, has had a great deal to do with the activity in the Brookhaven section.

B. B. HARE RETURNS TO ATLANTA HEADQUARTERS

Butler B. Hare, secretary of the Fifth Civil Service district, had just returned to the Atlanta headquarters from a trip over the entire district, which comprises six southern states. Mr. Hare says that a publicity campaign will be undertaken soon in which interest in civil service jobs, some of which pay as high as $3,600 a year, will be a boom. Examinations are going on here now and will continue into the month of May.

PIEDMONT HIGHLANDS OPENED; LOTS FACE ON PIEDMONT AVENUE

The Georgia Land and Investment company, of which Charlton Barrett is the head, has opened a new residence subdivision, known as Piedmont Highlands.

This subdivision is on one of the most attractive drives in Fulton county, which is Piedmont avenue, formerly the Plaster's Bridge road. This is really an extension of Piedmont avenue from the Driving club into Peachtree road.

Automobile drivers now take this direction from town, making a loop at Peachtree road and returning that way, or else taking side drives along the other fine roads in north Fulton county.

The new subdivision is just east of Piedmont Peachtree road, and is destined, within a few years, to be taken into the city.

It has the advantage of being neither too near nor too far from the city, and is on a main boulevard leading from the north side to the Brookhaven section through Peachtree road.

The subdivision is not only convenient to other fine roads of the north Fulton section, but is surrounded by the property of wealthy owners and by some of the most beautiful estates of the county.

The same owners own the Decatur Heights subdivision, whose rapid sale was a real estate sensation.

Since that subdivision was put on the market the street car line was extended to a point in front of the property and another new public school, costing $25,000, has been completed.

Equally sensational was the sale by the Georgia Land and Investment company of the Peachtree Road Park subdivision, facing the Brookhaven country grounds. A total of 102 lots was offered, and every one of the lots was sold in a short time.

SILVER LAKE ESTATES

WILL ORGANIZE SOON

Meeting Will Be Held April 25, When Charter Will Be Adopted

Formal announcement is made today of the organization meeting of Silver Lake estates, to be held in Atlanta Saturday, April 25. Subscribers to Silver Lake Estates will then adopt their charter and by-laws and choose a board of directors and officers for the management of the property they are planning to develop as a high class residence community.

Silver Lake Estates has an authorized capital of $500,000. The company has been chartered and is now organized for the purpose of purchasing and developing for residence purposes the beautiful Silver Lake property. Oglethorpe University with a fund of $500,000 already raised, and to which Atlanta gave $250,000 of this amount, is already planning to build a new campus of Silver Lake Estates; and it is anticipated work will begin upon it this summer.

PLAN OF L. P. BOTTENFIELD. Silver Lake Estates is the plan and project of L. P. Bottenfield, one of Atlanta's ablest and most energetic real estate developers. The project is one of the largest and most important from a residence subdivision standpoint Atlanta has seen in years; and Mr. Bottenfield is being widely congratulated upon the splendidly successful manner in which he conceived and carried it out.

For Silver Lake Estates is, today, a success. It remains only to organize and select officers and then the big work of development will begin. As a matter of fact work is now going on at Silver Lake and has been in progress for several weeks for the purpose of getting things ready for the thousands of spring and summer visitors who will go there.

There are seven miles of roads already laid out and graded through the property, and there are 3,000 feet of frontage on paved roads, including the Boulevard leading to the lake and Peachtree road. These latter roads need only resurfacing; the others need only to be paved. With this work well under way, as it soon will be, it is anticipated that it will be a matter of only thirty to sixty days before building lots in Silver Lake Estates are on the market ready for the home builder.

TO HAVE A STOCKY BOARD. The subscribers of Silver Lake Estates include many well known citizens not only of Atlanta, but of other sections of Georgia and of other southern states. Their names and standing are such as will insure the selection from among the stockholders of able and high-class officers and directors, thus assuring the public and purchasers of lots in this residence park that every promise made regarding improvement and development will be carried out.

One of the first developments will be the completion of the driveway encircling the lake and upon which there will be four miles of residence frontage looking directly upon this attractive body of water. Most of this road has already been graded and it will be the company's first work to finish it.

WATERS AND SEWERS

Adequate water and sewer systems will be installed at the start, ready for practically the first homes that will be built there. Transportation service will be provided, and all the essential conveniences of home life will be supplied. A summer pavilion with beautiful bathing houses will be erected on the lake at once for the benefit of the visitors who will go out this summer, and transportation service to the lake will be installed for their benefit. It is contemplated soon to erect a concrete pavilion, with boat and bath houses on the lake as a permanent structure. Other improvements include a club house, public schools and, ultimately, a tourist hotel which will crown one of the prettiest hills around the lake. The homes all around Silver Lake will be built upon hills. The ground is high and the outlook in every direction is an attractive one. In fact, there is not to be found anywhere in the country a prettier tract for home-building purposes, and with its many natural beauties and advantages, with the constructive body of water, most of which is to be made and with Oglethorpe University, the Princeton of the south, located here, Silver Lake Estates promises to become a high-class residence community that will be immediately and big demand for home building.

CLAIREMONT PARK IS NOW BEING DEVELOPED

Some Improvements That Have Been Made in Neighborhood of This Property

The greatest activity that has ever been known in the Decatur section is now taking place. Ponce de Leon Ave has already been graded to the Decatur Court House and Oglethorpe University, and the boulevard of the new city, which is to be a continuation of Ponce de Leon Ave. This site when completed will make the most beautiful drive in the entire South.

In addition to its good streets and sidewalks Decatur has the best schools of any town its size in the South. Its churches are among the best, and the board of trade is doing much toward the betterment of the sewerage system. Also they are bending every effort in conjunction with the numerous other interests to complete the granite pile from Decatur to Stone Mountain, which is to be a continuation of Ponce de Leon Ave. This site when completed will make the most beautiful drive in the entire South.

Adjoining Ponce de Leon is Clairemont Avenue, which runs direct into Peachtree Road, between the Capital City Country Club and Oglethorpe University and the Silver Lake Estates. Among the many improvements which are taking place on Clairemont Avenue, the most important is the rapid development of Clairemont Park, by the Reeves-Cline Realty company.

This park consists of about seventy acres, located on Clairemont Avenue, about two blocks from the Decatur Court House. The plans for the development of Clairemont Park now being made will make it one of the most attractive and exclusive residential parks of Ponce de Leon. The Reeves-Cline Realty company, state that they will have all improvements in this park as water, sewer, light, sidewalks, cherted streets and curbing, and will be in position to hunt for the wanting homes in this section, allowing them to be paid for like rent. Gas will also be a great feature in Decatur. And it is expected that it will increase the value of property in that section as soon as it is installed, which is to be within the next sixty days.

Plan to Help Unemployed

DUBLIN.—For the purpose of assisting 4,000 men who are unemployed in this city, a novel co-operative society, on Sybillican line, has been established. The moving spirit in the organization is Captain White, the son of the founder of Lady's Mount. Jim Larkin and Mr. George Russell, the well known Irish revolutionaries, are also members of the society. It is estimated for the present that a capital of $200,000 will suffice, and it is understood that the greater portion of the money has been either subscribed or promised, generous contributions having been received from English sources. The society is now in the process of organizing for contracts particularly in the building trade and to employ in various business activities, dividing the proceeds among the members of their community.

To Organize Pan-Hellenic

Monday afternoon at 2:30, in the parlors of the Hotel Dempsey, there will be an important meeting of all the worthy women of the city. The object of the meeting is to discuss plans for the organization of a Macon Pan-Hellenic. Miss Kempton, secretary chairman of the Georgia Federation of Women clubs, desires to meet women of all the sororities of the city. Miss Kempton and Miss Ollie Barrow, both of Atlanta, are Friday afternoon for the purpose of organizing the chapter. Miss Kempton was just graduated by Mrs. Fitzpatrick, of the Georgia Federation, six weeks ago, and since that time has been organizing the Pan-Hellenic in Atlanta with 18 sororities represented, and in Boston, 10. Macon is the third to have the organization.

The young women will be in the city several days—Macon Telegraph.

REAL ESTATE BONDS AS SAFE INVESTMENTS FOR THE PUBLIC

R. H. Jones Tells How This Form of Investment Brings Both a Good Return and Yet Offers Safety for the Amount of the Funds Invested, and Explains How the Bonds Are Secured by Real Estate and How the Income Is Secured

BY R. H. JONES.

Real estate investors are appreciating more and more the numerous advantages in dealing in Atlanta property through the guaranteed 6 per cent, and also profit-sharing bonds of the Atlanta Development company.

The ordinary investor usually buys much more than he has money to pay for—assuming obligations which he is obliged to meet, or perhaps lose what he paid at first. He has also to pay interest on these obligations and taxes on the property. If he invested in vacant property he loses the interest on his cash payments. If these assumed obligations fall due before he has sold the property, frequently become very embarrassing, and often force him to sell at a time when it is not best to do so.

When you invest say $1,000 in property and assume $1,000 obligation, you have not made a safe investment for your $1,000, because there are $1,000 ahead of your $1,000, which must be protected first, and if you have not the $1,000 to pay and depend only upon the sale of the property itself to pay it, you are taking big chances.

These conditions are avoided when you deal in property through the secured guaranteed 6 per cent and also profit-sharing bonds of the A. D. Co.

The bonds are in $100, $500 and $1,000 denominations, so you can buy just what you can pay for in full. And as your money is added to and becomes a part of the entire capital used by the Atlanta Development company (which is now nearly $200,000) it enables the company to handle deals that an ordinary investor could not.

The company secures your bond against loss by placing their entire assets behind the bond. They are now over $1 security for every $1 of bond issued. In addition to the above ample security, the bond is specifically secured by a deposit of state of Georgia bonds as a sinking fund, held in trust to redeem these bonds at maturity.

The money used from the sale of bonds goes back with improvements on the property of the company. Thus your bond is thoroughly secured.

Six per cent interest (free of taxes) is paid from the date of your investment.

You get your proportion of one-half of all the profits as distributed from time to time—thus you are a full partner.

The company will redeem your bond in cash. You have the right to sell it at any time. The company will accept it as cash at any time in payment for property. The issue of these bonds is limited.

It is the only way we know of where by you can deal in Atlanta real estate with your capital secured against loss—receive a fixed and guaranteed income (free of taxes—company pays the taxes) and also get the profits made in handling this line of business.

These bonds are earning 20 per cent—the owners have received an average of 10 per cent in cash per year during the past three years, and the balance has been placed to surplus account for distribution from time to time.

The Atlanta Development company does not speculate. It handles only the staple residence property—bought in acreage form at wholesale—and after being properly developed, is sold in lots at the ruling prices of the surrounding property. Over twenty years experience by its management enables them to exercise the best judgment as to where and when to buy. Its past success is its best reference.

Should you wish to secure some of these bonds we would be pleased to call on you and show you the bond and more fully explain—take you out to see the property now owned by the company, and allow you how the money you pay for your bond will be invested. Or you might call in person at the office of the company, 1404 1/2 Third National bank building.

BROOKHAVEN HEIGHTS NOW ON THE MARKET

Fine Residence Subdivision Bounded by Peachtree Road and Decatur Road

That magnificent residence park, Brookhaven Heights, now being developed and sold by the American Realty company under the management of Mr. W. T. Martin is located in the triangle bounded on the north by Peachtree road, the Boulevard of the south, and on the east by Decatur road, which is the continuation of Clairmont avenue connecting Ames Scott with Peachtree and Oglethorpe, with Druid Hills a short distance to the south, and will with the completion of the extension of the Chesapeake Bridge road through this property to Peachtree be on the most direct route from Five Points to both the Capital City Country club and Oglethorpe University.

In fact it is impossible to reach either of these places without passing by or through Brookhaven Heights, which as you see justifies the claim of the center of north side development. This property is being developed along modern lines, safeguarded by the proper restrictions, beautifully laid out with wide streets and serpentine drives upon which cement or tile walks will be laid, trees planted, and many things that will add to its beauty and convenience. Brookhaven Heights is located on a plateau commanding a view of Peachtree road, Capital City Country club property, Oglethorpe University, and Atlanta, thus forming a panorama that is hardly excelled in Georgia.

The company developing this property bought before the University had been located in this section, and consequently are in a position to give their purchasers the benefit of the very low price on this magnificent property, and though it has been on the market only a very short time, more than $55,000 worth of these lots have been sold to date to the better class of home builders, among which are some of the most influential citizens of Atlanta.

Will Be Organized April 25

ANNOUNCEMENT

SILVER Lake Estates, with an authorized capital of $500,000, chartered to purchase and develop, for residence purposes, the famous Silver Lake property, is ready for organization.

Subscribers to Silver Lake Estates, who live all over the South, will meet in Atlanta Saturday, April 25th, for the purpose of adopting their charter and by-laws and electing officers and directors.

The names of these subscribers, including some of the most substantial citizens and business men of Atlanta, of Georgia, and of other southern states, give ample assurance that officers and directors of the highest class will be chosen for the management of the company's affairs.

Immediately following organization, the work of development, which is already under way, will be pushed as rapidly as men and money can make it go.

With seven miles of road frontage already developed, needing only road paving to complete it, and with 9,000 feet of frontage on roads already paved, more than one-third of Silver Lake Estates will soon be in shape for home-building.

Within thirty to sixty days building lots in Silver Lake Estates will be ready for inspection and purchase by prospective home-builders.

With Oglethorpe University to be built at once, practically as a part of Silver Lake Estates; with the restrictions which will be thrown around building there; with perfect water and sewer systems installed as one of the foremost developments; with transportation service which will be supplied, and with Silver Lake, the prettiest body of water in North Georgia, as a centerpiece, Silver Lake Estates will rapidly develop into one of the most attractive and desirable residence communities in the South.

Many Atlantians, many Georgians, are eagerly awaiting an opportunity to purchase home lots in Silver Lake Estates, and have urged us to let them know when they would be ready for sale.

We make this announcement for their benefit as well as for that of the subscribers whose interest and investments have made possible the development of one of the most attractive residence communities anywhere in the South.

PEACHTREE HEIGHTS PARK AS LOCATION FOR THE HOME OWNER

E. Rivers Tells Why This Park Is Desirable—It Is Built Up With Homes to the Park and on Beyond It, and No Subdivision Can Show Better Roads or Finer Topography for the Location of Fine Residences

There is no more attractive home-building property anywhere in or around Atlanta, than Peachtree Heights park. It is in the center of north side residence development; some of Atlanta's handiwork homes have already been built beyond it. It is a forceful statement, Secretary and Treasurer E. Rivers of the Peachtree Heights Park company, shows the splendid advantages which this property possesses for the location of the home.

"Peachtree Heights park speaks for itself," Mr. Rivers said. "It is only necessary for one to look at it carefully and compare it with any other residence property in or around Atlanta. We have no fear whatever of the result of any unprejudiced comparison. The plat showing the location of Peachtree Heights park, published in this issue, and a simple inspection of the property itself will tell the story a great deal stronger than I can put it in words."

Atlanta is built up in homes right to Peachtree Heights park. It is built in many handsome homes beyond it and now many Atlantians who are most particular about their location, are building on this property. The property in Peachtree Heights park proper was not ready for the market until last October. Now we are ready for anybody's most critical inspection, and we defy any subdivision in Atlanta, Fulton county, Georgia, or the south, to show a prettier tract, more beautifully winding roads or lots that be better, with all city conveniences and located at just the proper distance from the business center of the city for home building.

LOCATION IS RIGHT.
"Absolutely the only criticism which has ever been directed at Peachtree Heights park has been based on its distance from Five Points, and we can attribute this only to a lack of adequate information regarding the property since it is official schedule fact that the trolley time to the business center of the city is quicker than from any other of Atlanta's residence sections which have been recently built up."

"The truth of the matter is that Peachtree Heights park is at the proper residence distance right now and that as Atlanta continues to grow at the same rate, it is possible that within a few years it will be a little bit closer in. Anticipating this condition, we have thrown around the park such restrictions as will take care of home building there for many years to come. The lots are large and the building lines are 80 feet back. No lot in the tract can be subdivided so as to make another lot which has less than 100 feet of frontage, and only one house can be built on 100 feet of frontage within the next 15 years. Long before this, every lot in the park will have been built up and those who live here will have it like they want it."

"Personally, I have given the question of home building in Atlanta a great deal of study, not only from observation, but from actual experience of my own, and I cannot understand why any man or woman should want to build a home on a cramped city lot and be cooped in the year around with the dust, smoke, noise and crowd that they must have. If they live as anywhere near the business section it is enough for a business man to breathe this sort of atmosphere all day. It must be repulsive to him to know that he has to go home and continue it at night."

24 MINUTES ON TROLLEY.
"Here in Peachtree Heights park we are offering the business man and the home making woman everything that goes to constitute an ideal home. At the present time, it is only 24 minutes by trolley from his office in the center of the city, with a ten-minute schedule. Every one must realize that time and growth and progress will give a still better trolley service and it will not be long before this will be greatly improved and express schedules put on which will make the trip to the business center within 15 minutes. There is nothing extravagant whatever about this prediction. It is merely a question of history in other large cities and it is history that will repeat itself in Atlanta."

"A business man is due his family some consideration whether he thinks of himself or not. It may not matter much to him personally where his home is located, but if he has any consideration for his wife and children, location is an essentially important factor. And when it comes to location from a family standpoint, he cannot improve upon Peachtree Heights park. I have always found it an advantageous policy in business to weigh and consider the suggestions and the ideas of successful business men. This policy has frequently been helpful to me in making up my mind in important transactions. In this connection, I might call attention to the fact that such men as Robert F. Maddox, W. H. Abernethy, John W. Grant, Morris Brown, J. K. O'Leary, W. S. Witham and many others well known to all Atlantians, have even built their all-year-around homes farther out than Peachtree Heights park, and I do not hesitate to say that if you will ask any of them or any others who have built homes out there, they will tell you they could not have done better or even so well, anywhere else in or around Atlanta."

TIME TO SELECT NOW.
"Atlanta's business men, or those who have recently come here to engage in business and to make their homes in this city, have a better opportunity right now to select and get the lots they want than they will ever have again; for there are more beautiful building sites to select from and never again will they be able to buy them as cheaply as they can right now. "If any business man will give proper consideration to the selection of his residence, whether he buys in Peachtree Heights park or not, he will begin to look around now. He will be sure on getting out of the dust and smoke of the city; on getting away from the close quarters of apartment house and out of the crowded and noisy business section."

"Naturally, we think we have got the best property anywhere in or around Atlanta, and with an examination and consideration of it and a comparison with any other, we are willing to rest on the decision reached as to its merits."

OGLETHORPE PARK TRACTS TO BE SOLD

retracts. Therefore, I say, let's look to the future growth of Atlanta and its suburbs before the club rejects an offer to acquire additional property that it will never have again, except at a large cost."

MR. MADDOX TALKS.
"The establishment of a country club at Brookhaven by the Capital City club has proven a wise and popular step. I think the club will unquestionably exercise its option to buy the property in June, 1916, and when we do, we will erect one of the handsomest club buildings in the south at a large cost."

This was the statement of Robert F. Maddox, president of the Capital City club, to whose efforts is due much of the credit, both for the leasing of Brookhaven and for the successful maintenance of the attractive country club.

"The tract," continued Mr. Maddox, "consists of 150 acres, ideally adapted as a country club. The lake, clear as crystal, and ideal for boating, is one of the prettiest in the state. The golf links, now nine holes, is being enlarged to an 18-hole course, which gives promise of being not only the sportiest in the city, but without question the most picturesque. The clubhouse, while attractive, both as to interior and exterior, and while answering its purpose at the present time, will probably give way to a larger one when we exercise our option to buy, and it is safe to assume that the Capital City will build a clubhouse of which all Atlanta may justly feel proud."

"The members of the club, without exception, as far as I have been able to ascertain, are tremendously pleased with the success of Brookhaven so far, and nothing will be overlooked in continuing its usefulness as an ideal country club."

WORLEY'S WOODLAND HILLS A TRIUMPH OF SUBDIVISION

Lots in This Subdivision Are Subject to Restrictions That Assure a High-Class Residence Community—It Is Situated on Piedmont Avenue, Briarcliff, Cheshire Bridge and Other Roads, and It Is Not Far From Piedmont Park

The idea of restrictions in fashionable residence subdivisions is being applied by W. E. Worley to his Woodland Hills residence subdivision.

There the lots are cut wide and deep, from 100 feet wide and 500 feet deep on up, and purchasers are restricted from subdividing their lots, and also as to the character of building and its position on the lot.

In subdivisions like this, the buyer is assured that he can build an expensive residence and not be bothered by his next door neighbor will back up a house against his, or that a factory or some other building not suited to a home section will be built on the same street.

The lots being large, the houses cannot be crowded. Woodland Hills is situated on Piedmont avenue, Briarcliff and the Cheshire Bridge roads, to say nothing of various other roads and driveways that connect with the old roads, and that are now being constructed by a large working force.

The subdivision is accessible through Highland, but is within easy access of several fine old country drives.

The Briarcliff road has been extended to the Cheshire Bridge road. The line of the Seaboard Air Line is on the border of the subdivision. Woodland Hills, a boulevard specially constructed, runs through the subdivision. This subdivision is not far from Piedmont Park, and is one of the close-in residence communities. Several fine residences will be built there.

Mr. Worley is one of the pioneer developers in the Ponce de Leon avenue section, and his first operations were east of the Southern railway and between that and Druid Hills. He forewent a big drift of residence population to that section, and operated accordingly. The results have justified his judgment.

But in Woodland Hills Mr. Worley has given his best study and accomplished his greatest achievement. His opening of this subdivision is one of the big developments of the year.

Walter Andrews and extends to Pace's Ferry road. This property was divided into seventy lots, all of which have been sold except ten. This undoubtedly is one of the most beautiful pieces of suburban property about Atlanta and is destined to be occupied by some of the most beautiful homes in that section.
